PRICE FIVE CENTS

EXAMINER FAILS TO O. K. DUFF LINE

Klan Not to Be Issue In G. O. P. Fight Centered on Jim Ferguson

NO CONCLUSIVE ACTION TAKEN

Recommends That Extension To Pt. Arthur be Denied

'FIGHT JUST BEGUN'

Duff, C.-C. Here to File Exception to Report

Denial of Port Arthur's joint petition with that of Col. R. C. Duff of Houston asking permission to construct an extension from Livingston, Texas, through Beaumont to West Port Arthur, or a marine facility line between Port Neches and West Port Arthur by the proposed Waco, Beaumont, Trinity and Sabine railway extension was made Saturday by the finance examiner of the Interstate Commerce commission at Washington, according to a special dispatch received by The News from Washington last night.

Approves Line to Port Neches

The examiner, according to the dispatch, recommended an extension from Livingston to Port Neches be granted. This had not been asked by Col. R. C. Duff, president of the road.

This recommendation from the examiner follows a report favorable to the line, made by the Texas Railway commission in July in which Port Arthur's application for terminal facilities of the Duff line was enthusiastically endorsed.

Port Arthur has 20 days to file an exception to the examiner's report. This will be done at once, Manager Art Borge and Traffic Manager H. Y. Taylor of the Chamber of Commerce and Shipping said last night. The next hearing probably will be sometime in October, when rigid exception will be made by Port Arthur to the recommendation, both said.

Port Arthur by no means has lost its original contention and this report is merely a setback to the opinion voiced by chamber officials.

Action "Inconceivable"

H. Y. Taylor, traffic manager of the Chamber of Commerce and Shipping, last night said of the examiner's unfavorable report:

"Action of the I. C. C. finance examiner is absolutely inconceivable. It is one of the most surprising statements I have ever seen issued from the commission's office.

"Until a detailed report is received it will be impossible to express an adequate opinion. Off-hand it is hard to understand that the report can possibly be correct. In such cases as these, which come before the finance division of the commission, it has been invariably the practice of the commission to either deny or grant them as a whole. The examiners making this report have certainly set a precedent that should not and must not be allowed to stand.

Leaves Line Marooned

"Plain business sense will show conclusively the utter worthlessness of a final decision based on such a report. Surely Col. Duff could not be expected to invest an enormous amount in this project and then have the very portion of the line most desired refused. From the traffic viewpoint of Port Arthur the report would have better denied the entire request.

"Under the rule a period of 20 days is now granted for filing of objections to the report. It will be the purpose of Manager Borge and myself to obtain a complete statement of the report at once and to confer fully with Col. Duff and his representatives. We shall then file just as strong an objection as can be drafted on the account of Port Arthur.

"This report makes it absolutely necessary that Port Arthur be represented at the oral argument, which will be held, probably, in October, subsequent to filing of exceptions to the report in the next twenty days. So that we may have an opportunity to present the strongest possible verbal argument to prove the utter worthlessness of the examiner's report, the Chamber of Commerce and Shipping will most certainly now arrange to be represented in person at the oral argument.

"On receipt of more complete information I probably shall have a more comprehensive statement to make."

The Austin Hearing

Subsequent to application on part of Col. Duff through the Interstate Commerce commission for permission under rules of that body to extend present line of that road south from Livingston to Port Arthur and to construct necessary waterfront facilities at this place for water tonnage, the federal body requested the Texas railway commission to hold a formal hearing at Austin as a representative of the former body.

The Interstate Commerce commission desired this hearing on the part of the Texas railway commission for the purpose of developing all information pertinent to the question.

This action, that of a hearing, was made necessary because of objections raised by the filing of formal complaint against Port Arthur's contention by the Kansas City Southern railway. It was the firm belief here and in traffic circles wherever the case came under observation that had not the K. C. S. made this objection, a hearing would never have been ordered or necessary and that desired permission would have been given.

The marine committee of the Chamber of Commerce and Shipping will meet in special session next Wednesday night to confer with E. S. Lampier, government superintendent of lighthouses for the New Orleans district which includes Port Arthur, to again discuss feasibility of further lighting the waterways of the Sabine district.

Lampier made a visit here last May and discussed the lighting plans. Since that time the Chamber maritime committee and a special committee of the Sabine District Industrial association have made investigations. It is hoped this meeting will result in something definite being decided on, Chamber officials say.

SOLE SURVIVOR RECALLS FIGHT

Paints Vivid Word Picture Of Dowling's Victory

BRILLIANT TRIUMPH

'Uncle Joe' Chasteen of Beaumont Describes Fight

By H. L. HUNT

The Port Arthur News Staff

Tomorrow, September 8, marks the sixty-first anniversary of the battle of Sabine Pass, Texas' notable achievement to the Confederate cause in the war between the states.

Dick Dowling with 40 others on a full morning in 1863 accomplished for the Confederacy the biggest naval victory of the civil war and for Jefferson county one event which secures it a niche in history which will never be effaced.

To again hear the shot of cannon and musketry booming across the placid waters of Lake Sabine, one must do one of two things: Use his imagination extensively or read of Texas or U. S. history.

'Uncle Joe' Chasteen's Story

There is one exception to this. Theron hangs this story in which, were Jefferson county native and adopted son and daughter feels an interest.

If you know 'Uncle Joe' and 'Aunt Molly' Chasteen, who have lived at Sabine Pass, Sabine, Port Arthur and Beaumont at different times during the past 60 years, you can get another account of the great event.

'Uncle Joe' and 'Aunt Molly' are getting old in years. They have lived together more than 50 years, but at heart are young as ever.

'Uncle Joe' is the only man in the United States who can tell you the story of the battle of Sabine Pass at first hand. Uncle Joe is 91 years of age. It has been 61 years since the Yankees were defeated in their endeavor to land a force of troops at Sabine Pass and enter Texas and control its ports.

Mind Still Keen

Uncle Joe is blind and bent. His mind, however, is as active and keen as when young. He is an elderly person who has yet to earn the appellation of being "childish."

Uncle Joe was found at a relative's home here in Port Arthur. "If you can get him to tell the story of that battle, he'll give you more details than have ever been printed in history," the writer was told.

Uncle Joe and Aunt Molly were at lunch. After introductions were over, the aged veteran approached and got into the subject in his own way.

(Uncle Joe, are there any persons)

Wales Causes Laugh When He Is Shooed Off Belmont Track

'H. R. H.' Believed to Have Bet on Loser in Second Race, But No One Knows Just How Much

BELOMONT PARK, NEW YORK, Sept. 6.—A cat can look at a kitten and a race track laughed at a prince this afternoon.

It was a good natured spontaneous laugh and the occasion was when the Prince of Wales was shooed hastily from the jumping course by two liveried flunkies. H. R. H. and some friends had wandered onto forbidden ground during the running of the second race and had to skip nimbly out of the way at the insistence of the attendants.

Incidentally, there is reason to believe that Wales lost a bet on this race.

Sole Survivor of Battle of Sabine, Sept. 8, 1863

'Uncle Joe' and 'Aunt Molly' Chasteen, of Beaumont, have been married 61 years and have lived all this time in Jefferson county. Uncle Joe, so far as Civil War records show, is the only living survivor of the battle of Sabine Pass fought in September, 1863. He will be 92 years old in this month. Aunt Molly is now 87. These pioneers have lived at Port Arthur, Beaumont and Sabine Pass in their more than half a century's residence in the county.

Garment Plant Drive Ends With $50,000 Pledged by Pt. Arthur

Location Here of New Industrial to Give Employment To 125 to 200 People Now Assured

Wiring O. D. West, Little Rock manufacturer, that Port Arthur stood behind his proposal with $49,500 cash to back a $700,000 garment factory to be erected here within 90 days, the Port Arthur Chamber of Commerce and Shipping through Chairman Ed Lohmann of the committee who raised the necessary stock to match the amount subscribed by West, said Saturday night the industry was assured.

Lohmann stated the necessary $49,500 has been all subscribed and all signed up except $2,500 which had been held over until Monday for an out-of-town man. According to Manager A. L. Borge of the Chamber of Commerce, the necessary $49,500 has been all subscribed and all signed up except $2,500 which had been held over until Monday for an out-of-town man. According to Manager A. NOME, Alaska, Sept. 6.—The crew of the Hudson Bay Company's supply ship, Lady Kendersly, 22 on board, was brought here today by the United States coast guard cutter Bear.

The Lady Kendersly became fast in the ice northwest of Point Barrow, August 4, and for nearly a month her crew sought to free her from the ice mass or to reach themselves before she should crack under the crushing weight of the ice and take them to the bottom.

As they came out of the blue, swiftly looming larger, a band played the national anthem, guns roared when the planes finally settled on the historical waters of Boston harbor the strains of "Home Sweet Home" were carried to them on the west wind.

Dallas Convention Plans Election Strategy

DALLAS, Sept. 6.—The fight of the republican party in Texas for the coming general election will be directed against former Governor James E. Ferguson as the potential head of state democracy, republican leaders agreed here today on the heels of the meeting of the state republican executive committee.

'No Trades,' Says Cragger

Indications that the Ku Klux Klan would not be an issue were seen in the statement of B. B. Cragger, republican national committeeman from Texas, who denied that the state party had got and would not make 'any character or trade or combination with any group or class.' The Klan was not mentioned by name in the statement of the national committeeman.

Decision that the Texas republican would stage their greatest fight in support of Dr. George C. Butte, the nominee for governor and the state ticket, has been agreed upon. It was stated.

'The brunt of the campaign will be made against Jim Ferguson—not against Ma Ferguson.'

Talbot Accuses Ferguson

If Jim Ferguson is not the nominee of the party, why is he promising appointments in Austin and dictating the democratic platform? questioned W. E. Talbot, member of the state executive committee from Dallas.

Dr. Butte is expected to land in the United States within a week and will probably come direct to Dallas for a conference with state republican leaders, it was announced.

An active speaking campaign will be made by Dr. Butte and republican leaders.

COLLEGE BOOKS BIG ENROLLMENT

Mexico, Five States, 50 Cities Represented Here

All records for enrollment of new students have been broken for the opening of Port Arthur College Monday, says A. B. Chienler, president of the college.

Students from 50 towns in five states and Mexico, all of them never before enrolled, were represented in Saturday enrollment and many more are expected to enroll Monday. Local enrollment, says President Chienler, is also heavier than ever before.

Mrs. Minnula McKenna, dean of students, was busy yesterday locating out-of-town girls in the dormitory and boys in private residences. Heads of departments and other faculty members were on the job all day yesterday receiving new students.

New features in the college program this year, says Chienler, will include the abolition of the term system. Students will be permitted to enroll at any time, and will be allowed to advance as fast as their ability permits.

Students will be entirely on their own ability, and can enter any day they please. Diplomas will be given at the completion of the course. Ordinarily it will take six months to complete a single course, with nine months for a double course, but a bright student may cut this down considerably, or another student may take longer.

NAMES ORANGE MAN PRISON COMMISSIONER

ORANGE, Texas, Sept. 6.—W. B. Simmons of Orange, democratic county chairman and prominently known in state politics, was appointed a prison commissioner late Saturday afternoon by Governor Neff to fill the vacancy caused by the expiration of the term of Homer D. Wade.

In making the appointment Governor Neff requested Simmons to go to him in Houston Sunday night where they will proceed to Huntsville, Monday for a conference of the prison board.

ROADS TO HOUSTON SLIGHTLY IMPROVED

Majority of summer tourists visiting Port Arthur have returned and a few autoists are asking for road information at the Chamber of Commerce and Shipping compared to the hundreds earlier in the season. C. K. Delbusk of the chamber staff states.

No more road reports are being sent out weekly as during the heavy tourist season. Roads to Houston, which have been very rough practically throughout the summer, are reported as slightly better following recent showers, Delbusk says.

All other roads over Texas and Louisiana are comparatively good, the reports received last indicate.

Port Arthur to Fight Beaumont Effort To Spend Prec. 2 Funds

Chamber Officials Declare Charges in Published Beaumont Article 'Obviously, Ridiculously False'

When Beaumont lobbyists check in at the new Stephen F. Austin hotel in Austin ne. January at the initial convening of the 30th legislature determined to stay all summer or get an amendment passed by the legislature whereby Port Arthur will have to spend its road money outside the own precinct to build roads elsewhere over the country, they will more likely find from Port Arthur some competition.

This was the intimation Saturday from Chamber of Commerce and Shipping headquarters following a published newspaper editorial from Beaumont going on record favoring such an amendment.

Refutation of charges in the account were secured from Manager A. L. Borge of the Chamber and Henry Lohmann, chairman of the road roads committee, who were asked to verify or deny the main facts in the article.

Burge and Lohmann both stated they were volunteering nothing, not caring to enter any controversy, but answered all questions asked.

The Beaumont story charges three specific indictments against Port Arthur as to why this precinct should be stopped by a constitutional amendment from spending its own road and bridge funds for its own benefit and this money instead be placed in the hands of the four commissioners and county judge to distribute in parts of the county where these think it should go.

First: "Virtually all the roads that can be used have been built in that precinct by present already."

Second: "This precinct could very well use its surplus funds for an adequate highway between Port Arthur and Beaumont but the people of the county where these think it should go."

ENGINEERS TO GIVE VAUD SKITS

'La Belle Marie' Home Talent Offering

One hundred Camp Fire Girls presenting ballet and solo dances in costumes, with special lighting effects, will be seen in the 11th Engineers' production, "La Belle Marie," to be given next Friday, Saturday and Sunday nights in the Elks theater for the benefit of the proposed armory in this city.

Featured in the vaudeville skits, in addition to the 45-minute entertainment, entitled "Heads Win," will be musical numbers by the Apollo Male quartet, comprised of Earl Griffith, first tenor; Earl J. Bonnin, second tenor; Charles Gordon, baritone; and Emmett Taylor, bass; selections by Mrs. J. E. Grammer, soprano, accompanied by Miss Lucile Price; and violin numbers by Gordon Hanneman, violinist, accompanied by Mrs. I. A. Durke.

Tickets are on sale in a booth erected on Procter street at Austin avenue, with special soft drink stands, and members of the National Guard companies in Port Arthur, the headquarters and service company and band, and the 11th engineers, sponsoring the show, also are selling the tickets.

COMMISSIONERS

(Continued from Page 1.) and are being kept among families and neighbors spreading the germs. The court now tells us we must wait 30 days while the bills are advertised according to law and then further delay while these are decided on.

"Since members of the board are of the opinion the court members were either too busy trying to retain their offices or were afraid to branch the sanatorium expenditure and did not want to do anything until after election. Whatever it is the public has a right to know and some special measure should be found by the court to meet this need of humanity," Rev. Hassler declared.

PORT ARTHUR

Third: "The county is governed by four commissioners and a county judge and they should be permitted to spend the taxes where they are needed irrespective of the source of the taxes."

"Ludicrously False"

To the first charge, that "Port Arthur has all the roads now it can use and funds accumulating for this precinct will not be needed for more highways" the officials branded it as "obviously and ludicrously false." Port Arthur has but one highway at the present time and that is a stem out of Beaumont these say. "For 23 years Port Arthur precinct has had roadways which have needed to be shelled and have never had money to do it with until recently when the law we now have and which Beaumont wants repealed checked the county commissioners from spending it all on roads in other parts of the county," was the reply of one official.

Port Arthur needs to complete its Orange road project. It wants and has a right to build the proposed beach road to Bolivar Point and on to Galveston through this precinct. It has needed for years a highway direct from Port Arthur to the La-Belle community which is less than 10 miles away but because of road conditions now one must travel more than 20 miles via Beaumont to get from that community here. It should have another road which would connect this city with one and make it possible to get to Houston from Port Arthur without having to go out of the way to Beaumont. This is the position taken by Chamber officials.

"Port Arthur needs a road to Cameron parish and the Johnson Bayou section across Lake Sabine to Louisiana points which can be built by erecting a causeway at the narrowest point in the lake. In fact Port Arthur needs more roads than any section of Jefferson county."

Head Statute's Protection

"Even though it is a precinct gets 47 per cent of the entire road fund it needs it, for Port Arthur, until Commissioner Hughes went into office, never has been able to get a look in on county road appropriations. Only the present law will ever give us a chance to build roads needed for the past showed us and present lack of roads is evidence of what will happen if we are without the protection of the statute we now have," was a final statement in answer to the first proposition.

The second charge that Port Arthur is not disposed to build another highway or make boulevard from here to Beaumont was admitted as practically true.

"We are getting along very nicely with the recent road to Beaumont. We need roads so much worse in all parts of this precinct we are not disposed to approve a measure to spend the money on a project which will do Port Arthur little good and would be the same old question of spending for the other fellow and getting nothing in return," was the answer.

Cite Bitter Experience

To the third charge that the county commissioners and judge, as the quintet to regulate county affairs, should be the sole body to say where the road money would go, the chamber officials declared that Port Arthur knows from bitter experience such a theory sounds excellent but works heartbreakingly. Port Arthur is the largest city in the south not a county seat. This makes its position one different from other cities its size, they point out.

County commission meetings are regulated by a majority vote. With Port Arthur having 47 per cent of the county road money due its precinct, the Port Arthur commissioner would have little opportunity to prevent his three colleagues from reaching in, appropriating the entire amount and leaving Port Arthur the great pleasure of paying but denying it the greater joy of reaping its own benefits of its own money, they said.

"We never want Port Arthur road funds or other funds at the mercy of a Jefferson county commissioner's court again. The present statute is, we believe, just and equitable and is apparently working well elsewhere. It is our protection, and every move to bar it from the statute book will be checked with all our energies and resources," the officials concluded.

NO CONCLUSIVE

In accordance with the K. C. S. protest, which made it necessary a hearing be held, the case came before the Texas Rail commission during February of this year. In a memorable session in which the keenest interest was shown by cities all along the line of the proposed route and in territory affected by the success of the Duff line, the Texas body entered into the details of a hearing.

Port Arthur Well Represented

Port Arthur was represented by officials of the Chamber of Commerce and Shipping headed by President Howard Smith and Manager A. L. Burge and representatives of practically every diversified line of business in this city numbering more than a score. This city's delegation was joined by similar delegations from Beaumont, Waco and other cities.

More than 25 witnesses were placed on the stand during the hearing and a voluminous record was made. With the exception of the representatives of the Kansas City Southern absolutely no testimony was given objecting to Duff's and Port Arthur's request.

Subsequent to the Austin hearing briefs of interested parties were made up and filed with the Interstate Commerce commission by representatives from Port Arthur and others affected by the decision.

10,000 Names on Petition

Port Arthur went even further in presenting its case. Petitions to the rail commission asking that Port Arthur's viewpoint be carefully considered and presenting the merits of its contention were circulated by a large drive committee from the Chamber of Commerce and Shipping. The result was that approximately 10,000 names were secured.

The signatures and petitions were sent to Washington. On June 17 last these were presented in person to the members of the Interstate Commerce commission by Senators Morris Sheppard and Earl Mayfield. After carefully considering for several months the contention of Col. Duff and Port Arthur as against that of the Kansas City Southern the Texas rail commission formally went on record early in July giving unqualified approval to the request of the applicants. This victory for Port Arthur was considered as a long step toward final adjudication of the case favoring this city's standpoint.

Testimony of the hearing before the Texas commission with that body's decision was placed in the hands of examiners of the finance division of the Interstate Commerce commission, where it has been until the decision given out from that source Saturday.

SOLE SURVIVOR

Uncle Joe showed he had pondered the subject before and said: "There may be two. Seven years ago I wrote to a man in my company named D. R. Simmons at Opelousas. He answered and we corresponded a couple of years. He quit answering my letters and I assumed he was dead. Never did find out for sure."

"Then there was another fellow, the youngest in the whole outfit, who I heard was living in Denton county. The postmaster at the address gave me the man had left, so I don't know whether he's dead or not. Unless these are alive I am the only one left who was there," he replied.

Not in the Fort

Uncle Joe was not one of the "Forty Irishmen and one American" who were in the fort with Dick Dowling when the big fight came off. He was one of a main contingent of several hundred soldiers who had gone out a few miles down the lake from the fort, scouting around.

Uncle Joe was a second lieutenant and was on a small boat called the "Uncle Ben," with 150 men aboard, doing picket duty. When the battle actually commenced there were less men inside the fort than at any time since the defense position was taken by the Confederates at Sabine Pass.

Captain Henry Odium, the commander of the fort, was not even in side and young Dick Dowling, jolly young son of Erin, but 21 years old and with a second lieutenant's commission, was in charge.

Here Uncle Joe can best take up the narrative and tell it in his own words. He is sitting in a large rocker and has a heavy cane which he pounds on the floor, swings over his head, or points straight out in stern defiance, as he lives over the stirring days again.

Uncle Joe's Story

"I was on the Uncle Ben about three miles from the fort and we heard the firing. There was a little supply house about where Sabine is now and we were putting into shore there. We had no intimation that the Yanks were slipping in on us. We pulled two of the cannon, the port to the supply store, where I found Captain Odium, the commander of the fort."

"Joe, Dick, almost by himself back there at the fort, and those cannon are not booming for nothing. Round up all the men you can find and let's beat it back," Captain Odium said.

"Well, we put on full steam ahead and started on down to the fort. We could hear booming and thundering and knew Dick was holding her so far. Long before we got to the fort the booming had ceased. We approached cautiously, for we thought it was all over with Dick and his few men."

Dowling Accepts Sword

"When we got to the Pass and saw the fort, it was still intact. We looked out and saw two ships completely disabled and a third limping weakly away, back out of the Pass into the Gulf."

"We pulled up alongside the Clifton and there was Dick Dowling, just a darn kid, aboard one of the biggest ships in the Yank navy, taking the sword of the captain of the ship. The captain hadn't learned that just a beardless kid and 40 men had given him so many different kinds of hell."

"Say, Joe," Dick called to me, "help get these fellows back to camp, as he and his men were taking side arms away from the men on the Clifton. The Schem was also in a bad way and we boarded her and took prisoners off too. Many of the soldiers aboard threw their sidearms into the Pass."

"When the Pass was dredged about 12 years ago a number of those guns were found. We took 472 men off those two ships and got them back to the supply camp. We didn't want them to know how few there were at the camp, so before daylight the next morning we had them on their way to Beaumont overland and were sending them to Mississippi as prisoners of war."

Forty Capture 500

"There was one funny thing I have often thought of since then, about those prisoners. Still hoodooed and thinking there were thousands of us around, it never occurred to those nearly 500 men to try to capture us. They stacked about two wagon loads of swords, pistols and personal belongings by a warehouse."

"They could have, had they known it, charged us with their own ammunition and whipped us to death. Dick had put the fear of the Almighty in them, though, back there at the fort and I guess one of us could have handled the whole gang."

Uncle Joe was asked to tell about the battle itself.

"Well, we had them cheated in the first place. We had five small cannon at the fort, and we had fixed them secure. Capt. Keith of the leading Yankee ship, the Clifton, had it in his head he was going to have as easy a time capturing Sabine Pass as Galveston. A few weeks before, this same squadron had come into Galveston harbor, pulled up in front of the guns and the guns didn't fire a shot. He figured it would be the same at Sabine Pass."

Dick Dowling knew our guns. We had them re-enforced with steel rails and embedded with 12 by 12 pins. Galveston's guns might have not been able to stay put, but we knew ours would.

Played Waiting Game

Dick played a waiting game. The Clifton steamed haughtily into the Pass and was going to lead the way for blocking our escape by water. The Clifton and Schem, with the Texas came up broadside of the fort. At the mouth of the Pass a bottling-up process was carefully made by the Texas and Louisiana lengthening themselves along the channel.

"Dowling intended to fire first, and though he didn't know it was using great psychology. The Clifton came right on up to get a good range on the fort. It had two small guns and was getting these trained on the fort. Dowling beat the Clifton to it. He fired two of the cannon, the port to the supply store, where I found Captain Odium, the commander of the fort. The guns were then rapidly turned on the Schem further down behind the Clifton. One or two shots went high and took the mast off. Soon she was disabled."

Other Ships Disabled

"The only other ship left within range now was the Arizona, the Texas and Louisiana, at their positions at the mouth of the Pass, had seen the two lead ships completely disabled and the Arizona getting in the same condition."

"The Louisiana and Texas steamed out of the way and the Arizona had room to get out of the trap, but not until she had received several healthy shots from the fort cannons. There were 22 ships in the convoy and these steamed on back to the Gulf, as far as we knew, went on to New Orleans."

"We never could definitely learn what became of the Arizona. We later heard she sank a few miles out in the Gulf and a number of her crew drowned and others picked up by the convoy. We know this—it had a number of cavalry supplies and horses aboard. The horses were hobbled so they could drown and be of use to the Confederates."

"Hundreds of horse carcasses were scattered up and down the beach after the battle."

20 Killed on Clifton

"When the Clifton and Schem got their death blows, about 20 men were killed on the former. A boiler was burst by one of the shots and the men scalded. Others fell overboard and were otherwise killed. We never learned, exactly, the total casualties."

ran up the white flag the Schem followed suit. Dowling ordered firing to cease. The Clifton commander yelled across to the fort for them to come and take his men ashore. Dowling and his Irishmen piled into a small boat and went out to the Clifton."

"Where's your commander, sonny?" the Clifton commander said, as he looked at young Dowling. "Oh, he's over at the camp. I'll take your sword, though," the Irishman said as the astonished commander began to realize he had been licked by a mere strapping.

"Dick had 40 other Irishmen and a fellow named Madden to help him out. He didn't lose a man and never seemed to think he had done anything particularly notable. He was just a romping kid and everybody thought a lot of him. He was made captain and naturally became a great hero."

"There is no telling what would have happened if those 22 ships had landed. It is certain they would have made Sabine Pass a supply base. There were several thousand soldiers and worlds of supplies in the convoy. Most of the ships didn't stay to see what was happening. Dowling would have shot them down all day, and when they saw the leaders fall, those Yankee ship captains knew it and got away."

Uncle Joe told his story interestingly and with emphasis. His voice clear and deep, he recited the battle details with delight. Aunt Mollie sitting nearby every now and then would verify a date or supply a name.

Uncle Joe was asked to tell what became of Dick Dowling.

"Oh, Dick stuck it out through the war and everywhere he went he was a hero. He married Captain Odium's daughter and was still just a kid when the war was over."

"He went back to his home in Houston. His popularity was so great he was induced to go into the saloon business. He made money hand over fist. He never got the swell-head. He was always just a good-natured Irishman that everybody had to like."

Dowling's Death at 26

"I understand he took down with a lingering fever and died when just

26 years old. I doubt whether he ever would have grown up. He had so much energy, life and wit about him. He never knew he emerged one of the greatest heroes of the civil war. If he had lived to be a hundred years old, he would never have known it. Uncle Joe's voice trailed off into reminiscences as he said the last soft ly.

"No, sir, Dick never knew he was a hero and never would have known it, said the only survivor of the great battle which 400 indirectly took part in. One could imagine, somewhere, a hale and hearty, though his eyes are dim and his step feeble, and is determined to live for a great many years long."

But Uncle Joe Chasteen still is binnacle of soldiers, Confederate soldiers, all waiting for a reunion.

"We are all here but Joe Chasteen. Wonder why he's standing away so yet."

SCOUTS RESUME FALL ACTIVITIES

Several Troops Hold Re-organization Meetings

Fall and the reorganization of boys through their common meeting place, the schools, also brings Port Arthur into another closer organization for sports and outdoor exercises. This is the Boy Scout organization, and troops more or less inactive during the summer months, except for the trek of the Purple Neckherchief Bicycle patrol to San Antonio and return, will shortly plunge into Scouting activities.

Re-organization meetings of the Lone Star Sea Scouts, of Troops 6, 15 and 16 were among those held in Port Arthur Boy Scout circles during the past week, and while the boys reviewed the fun and frolic of the summer, they also got down to the business of outlining and shaping up their plans for the winter months.

TROOP 15. We opened the first meeting since school closed last Wednesday. The Scout troop was in uniform. Dues were collected to the amount of $2.10 and we now have $20.30 in the troop treasury which Nolan Landry will handle for the troop.

Then the Scoutmaster held a little business meeting and discussed the fair. Below are the names of the boys who will take an active part in the fair: Vernon Horrid, Norman Yentzen, Herman Carrier, Oswald Landry, George Bordunova, Ashton Riche, Chester Billeaud, S. J. Wolford, Nolan Landry, Roy and Ray Gentil, Ray Billeaud. Each have been assigned to some particular duty. We then elected officers of the troop. Patrol 1. Oswald Landry, P. L., and Noley Landry assistant; Patrol 2. Chester Billeaud, P. L., and Ray Billeaud assistant; Patrol 3. Norman Yentzen, P. L., and Ray Gentil, assistant. Then we thought we wanted a few more candidates so we decided to give a Scout uniform to the boy who brings in the largest number above twelve Scouts. And a Scout hatchet or knife in a case. Then the Scoutmaster being so well pleased with this, said that he would give $5.00 to the boy who brings in the most candidates. We then decided to have a swimming party on Friday evening at 5:30 p. m. all to meet on DeQueen and Lake Shore. The pledge of allegiance was given and the meeting closed.

RAY BILLEAUD, Scribe.

TROOP 16

We met at the church last Friday night at 7:30. Before the meeting we played a few games. Rev. Ridout was with us. The meeting was called to order. Murray McCoy, acting as junior patrol leader. The Defense Day program for the Scouts was explained. Seven boys also agreed to help the American Legion distribute their circulars and papers. Dues were collected, also equipment fees. Rev. Ridout explained the second class and first class requirements and urged the boys to get together and do better work. Reorganization in general took place. New seals, songs and names were decided upon by the various patrols and from the looks of things it is going to be a banner year. Those members who were absent will be gotten hold of during the week and a general campaign to increase the membership of the troop will be made. Everybody turn out for the meeting next Friday night.

WESLEY PRICHARD, Acting Scribe.

TROOP 6

Troop 6 held their first meeting of the season on Friday night at 7:30 p. m. in their old meeting place at the K. C. hall. The meeting was taken up mainly for the purpose of reorganizing the troop after its vacation. Only seventeen of the members were present but this was ample enough to proceed with the business. The members were called upon to nominate seven scouts of which four boys would be voted as patrol leaders. Those who were nominated were Milton Quebedeaux, Alfred Moreau, Lawrence Moreau, Erwin Laughlin, Aristide Landry, Walton Dumesnil and George Stiehl. Then the ballots were handed out and the scouts were allowed to put four names of the scouts who were nominated. Those who were elected are Alfred Moreau, Erwin Laughlin, Aristide Landry and George Stiehl. The patrol leaders lined up they were as follows: Patrol 1. Aristide Landry, P. L., Adam Rodriguez and Joe Moore. In patrol 2. Alfred Moreau, P. L., Milton Quebedeaux, Lawrence Moreau, Tom Beadle, Roy Pitrie, Frank Hurdleik and Elroy Quebedeaux.

Leonard Stansbury and S. J. Stansbury were in patrol 3, with George Stiehl as P. L., Walton Dumesnil headed patrol 4 with Raymond and Rodney Quebedeaux.

The next thing was the election of the Senior Patrol Leader, Leonard Stansbury and Bruno Watts were nominated. Bruno won with a margin of nine votes. Bruno was the old senior patrol leader and we hope by re-electing him he will continue to live up to his good work. The scribe was next elected. Lawrence Moreau and Leonard Stansbury were nominated and Leonard won by a majority of 14 votes.

Scoutmaster Scully announced that the old contest of the Scouts on the ladder will be renewed. Patrol 4 won the last contest and the scoutmaster said he hoped for some other patrol to win this time. The prize will be a five dollar bill as usual, so, Scouts, get busy and win that prize. Another announcement by the Scoutmaster was that the scouts would take part in the fair which will start October 14th. Those wishing to take part in the fair will turn their names in to Scout Headquarters. Saturday the Scouts delivered circulars for the American Legion show to be given to help them raise funds to complete their new home. Ten scouts were picked.

A cracker race was the next event of the evening. Each patrol leader picked out three boys and they lined up with two patrols on each side facing each other. When the word was given the number ones began to eat. Number two started until the last one had begun. When each one finished eating he was obliged to whistle before the others started to eat. This furnished much amusement. The next game was a dime race which Tom Beadle won and Leonard Stansbury second. Each won a dime. The meeting was closed with the pledge of allegiance to the flag.

LEONARD STANSBURY, Scribe.

AD SCOUTS RESUME

"LONE STAR" SEASCOUTS

Seascouts met aboard the good ship "Lone Star" Wednesday night to discuss the new Seascout program and plan for the next nine months. Skipper Kusling explained the new program mapped out by national headquarters. The ranks have been changed to "Cabin Boy," "Apprentice," "Ordinary," and "Able," the highest rank of "Quartermaster" being a "ping dinger to qualify for and in fact all of the grades are worth working for. The tests have been changed about a great deal. The tenderfoot, second class and first class requirements have all been added into the Seascout requirements. Therefore a boy who succeeds in passing the various grades is as well fitted for land service as he is for sea service. Prior to this a boy need not have passed any of the tenderfoot second class or first class requirements. It is more of a working program than a study program which pleases most of the members. Another new department is the Seascout Reservists, composed of boys either too young or unable to join the regular Seascout organization because of objections offered by parents. However, the Reserve does not have the privileges a regular member of the Seascouts has nor can he wear the official uniform.

It was decided to elect new coxswains to serve until May, 1925. The three new coxswains are: Walter O'Neil, Owen King and Willie James. The boys were allowed to choose which coxswain's crew they chose to belong to. General revision of by-laws, etc., will take place at the next meeting. It is hoped that we will have five full crews by January. Please be on hand for the next meeting, Wednesday night at 7 p. m.

The following is an account taken from the log of the cruise taken by Henry Larssen, Owen King, Don Person, Harvey Winger and Walter O'Neil. The Porpoise was used to make the cruise.

August 25.—After a week of preparation left boat house at 2 p. m. Light east northeast wind, clear sea. Wind squall at 3:15 blown around and had to lower main sail. Took half an hour to get under way again. Making about four knots and sailing under jib only. 3:45, put up main sail again, still clipping off about four knots; 4:10, anchored about dredge to let S. S. Illinois by; 7:45, passed red light and entered Lake Sabine at 8:20, anchored for the night at 8:40.

August 26.—6:00 a. m., weighed anchor and caught a 1 1/2 pound cutfish (note in the log book states that it was not caught on the anchor). East wind, making about five knots. Anchored at Export Pier at 7 a. m. Hoisted anchor again at 8, making good time headed for Pleasure Pier.

Passed Pleasure Pier one hour later. Wind dying a little. Arrived Gates Beach at 11:30 a. m. Painting ship and swimming until 9 p. m. Varying winds from north to northwest. Don and Owen on watch from 8 to 12. Anchored about a mile and a half from shore.

August 27.—Weighed anchor at 7 a. m., arrived at old Seascout camp at 7:30. Left camp at 8:30, anchored at mouth of river or cove at 11:30, under way at 1:30 p. m. Good south wind; 6 p. m., off guard locks, making good time. Done found to be a clean man, washing dishes with Henry's socks. Anchored at 9:30 p. m. at Gates Beach.

August 28.—Still at Gates Beach at 9:30 a. m. Harvey going fishing. Harvey catches fish. Henry and Owen ashore. Don paints ship. Henry's fish for dinner.

Harvey ashore, Henry and Owen back aboard. Sail at 6 p. m., large audience. Plenty of applause. Swim and supper. Many visitors. Henry spends night on shore. Others rested in peace beginning at 10 p. m.

August 29.—Henry back on board early. Went fishing, no luck, so they took a sail. At Gates Beach all day ashore but Don. Harvey quite ship and Walter O'Neil signs up; 11:30 p. m., rain squall. Walter slips overboard, seconds one overboard during trip.

August 30.—Left Gates Beach with party of four besides crew. Sailed to Blue Buck Point. Strong east wind with threatening squall. Arrived at Point at 10:20 a. m. Fishing. Rain squall at 3 p. m.; 4 p. m., started for Pleasure Pier and arrived at 5 p. m. Down to Gates Beach. Trouble with cooking stove. Chewing gum makes it all O. K. again. All well for the night.

September 1.—Muffled alarm clock and slept till 6:30. Left for Clay Cliffs at 7:15 a. m. Strong east wind; 40 minutes on starboard tack. Port tack, 8 a. m. till 9:10 a. m. Port tack till 10 a. m. Weather agreeable and wind following slowly. Around through mouth of river into canal stopped at second clay cliff and had dinner. Down canal and arrived at boat house early that evening.

AIR PORT ON HISTORIC SITE

German Government Prepares Extensive Field

BERLIN, Sept. 6.—By the spring of next year Berlin will possess a well organized and extensive "air port" within its gates on the Tempelhofer Field, a vast field located in the southern districts of Berlin. Before the war the field was used for army drilling and twice a year great parades took place there before the Kaiser. An old poplar, known as the Kaiser Pappel (Kaiser poplar), still reminds the passers-by of the bygone days of splendid military spectacles. It was on the Tempelhofer Field that Orville Wright showed to the Germans the first successful flights of a heavier-than-air machine and from there Hubert Latham, the French pilot made the first cross-country flight in Germany to Johannisthal in his Antoinette monoplane. On this field also tens of thousands of enthusiastic people gathered when the first Zeppelin airship flew from Friedrichshafen to Berlin. Thus the Tempelhofer Field has played an important role in the history of aviation in Germany. Now one-half of it, as been covered with tiny cottages while the other half is already being used as a flying field from where the air mail planes of Stockholm and Munich start. A wireless station and two airplane sheds, each forty-seven meters in length, are being erected there. The Reich is bearing one-third and the City of Berlin two-thirds of the cost of building.

ACCUSE GARVIN OF DYE FRAUDS

Former Alien Property Chief Sued by U. S.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 6.—Charges that Francis P. Garvin, former alien property custodian and other government officials participated in a criminal conspiracy to defraud the United States in the sale of over six thousand German dye patents to the chemical foundation, Inc., for $250,000 was made in a brief filed by the government here today in the United States district court of appeals.

The brief also charges that Garvin and his associates sold the patents to a corporation in which they knew they would be interested later.

MAGNOLIA FIG RAISING NEAR HAMSHIRE, TEXAS

In the Hamshire, Winnie District of Jefferson County, the figs are of exceptionally good quality this year (1924), so Mr. Herman DeYoung in charge of the Winnie Canning factory reports.

In spite of seven weeks of unusually hot and dry weather, the fig crop is wonderful. Mr. A. Krumheuer picked in one day 2,300 pounds of figs worth $115.00. Mr. N. DeYoung picked on the same day 1,800 pounds worth $90.00. Mr. L. McCall picked from his (only two-year-old orchard) $65.00 worth in one day. These trees will be greater producers as they grow older.

Picking started this year July 20th and will continue until about November 20th or until frost comes.

1. Hamshire orchards produce such good results because they are planted on the RIGHT kind of land, drained 14 years ago, and free from alkali. Freshly drained blackland in the Gulf Coast Country frequently contains too much alkali for successful fig growing.

2. In Hamshire, the lateral ditches, built 14 years ago, carry off the water quickly after heavy rainfall. In other parts of Jefferson County, these necessary laterals have not been made.

3. Hamshire orchards are planted of home-grown healthy nursery trees. They are pruned by experienced orchardists in the right way, and at the right time.

4. The Hamshire orchards are cultivated to keep the ground moist and aired. The orchards always have a covering of loose soil as a mulch.

5. In Hamshire, the orchards get the proper fertilization and other treatments, which practical experience has proven to bring best results.

6. In Hamshire, our firm, and the orchardists have for more than twelve years studied the fig business and have become experts. WE HAVE LEARNED TO RAISE FIGS WITHOUT A CROP FAILURE.

7. In Hamshire we are offering to the man of moderate means a wonderful opportunity to become independent on a small investment, and to follow a pleasant occupation, which appeals to every intelligent man and woman.

8. The heavy work is done by Fordson Tractors hitched to plows or harrows. Fig growing gives a chance for an independent healthy life in the open air. You don't need to worry, if you do your duty to your orchard; then you are sure of success.

9. The man who buys land in the Hamshire district and does not wish to move on the land right away, can get it prepared, the trees planted and all the other work done by experienced local orchardists at reasonable rates. If the purchaser of land develops an orchard himself, he can have the benefit of advice and experience from Hamshire old-time orchardists, and thereby avoid mistakes.

10. The undersigned firm (who planted the first Magnolia Fig Orchard near Hamshire in 1910) offer for sale several thousand acres of best land, suitable for fig orchards, which has the many advantages mentioned in this statement.

11. The price for such land is only $50.00 to $60.00 per acre which can be paid for in monthly installments or if a man can pay one-third of the purchase, he can get warranty deed and abstract right away and give vendor notes for the balance, payable in 10 yearly installments.

12. The distance from Beaumont by auto over a hard surface road to Hamshire is a ride of about 45 minutes.

13. In Hamshire territory, you can (see besides a number of fig orchards everywhere) COTTON FIELDS, LOADED WITH BIG BOLLS, which we are now picking, September 6th; also fine peanuts and fine sweet potatoes still growing. We have raised large quantities of watermelons and cantaloupes and harvested fine crops of corn, cow peas, soya beans, mung beans, etc.

14. We have thereby shown that the necessary feed for dairymen and poultry farms can be successfully raised in Jefferson County, Texas.

15. For further information, for illustrated booklets and cost-calculations for the improvement of fig orchards, apply to:

ACCUSED SLAYER OF WIFE FREED ON BOND

COLUMBIA, Tenn., Sept. 6.—W. Lee Grant, wealthy local cord dealer charged with the murder of his wife was free under $10,000 bonds after a preliminary hearing.

At a previous hearing, Grant was dismissed, after evidence was introduced tending to show to woman committed suicide by swallowing poison. Mrs. Grant's body, battered and bruised, was found in the kitchen of her home August 11.

By CHARLES P. STEWART
News Staff Writer

Washington navy officers declare that the Washington armament agreement made the military defense of the Philippines impossible—or nearly so. Of course, it's impossible to quote individual officers to this effect, they can't afford to involve themselves in trouble with the administration. But it would be difficult to find one who does not feel that the Philippines would be lost to the United States within a week after the first hostile move by Japan—which is the only power considered in connection with any suggestion of a war, involving this country, in the Pacific.

Once lost, the experts agree that recovery of the island would be possible only at the cost of years, probably, of fighting, and expenditure running into the millions.

The point in which the Washington agreement is blamed is in preventing America from fortifying any naval base west of Hawaii—Guam, to be specific.

Naturally, being undefended, or nearly so, naval authorities argue that Japan, whose ships would reach it long before American men-of-war could do so, would seize Guam immediately. To recover it would be an undertaking of tremendous difficulty.

Fighting for the Philippines from Hawaii, then, would be at a range a third more than the distance between New York and Liverpool. Maintenance of communications, every expert concurs, would be a problem fairly staggering to the naval imagination.

In a short, sharp struggle, navy men say, the United States might be regarded as fighting on fairly even terms with Japan if her war fleet had twice the strength of Japan's. To maintain a blockade, they declare, three or four times Japan's strength would be necessary—and then it couldn't be easy.

In the meantime the Japanese force in the Philippines, which would have been able to establish itself fully months before American vessels could be on the scene, would be able to sustain itself on the islands themselves for some time.

Failure of the United States to maintain her navy at the "5-5-3" basis—5 for Great Britain, 5 for the United States and 3 for Japan—is not laid at the Washington agreement's door. In a sense navy men do blame the Washington government for it, but they say, charitably, that it is what generally happens after a war—a period of relaxation following an extraordinary effort.

Instead of a "5-5-3" basis, according to the navy estimate, it actually existing basis is "5-3-2-3"—5 for Great Britain, 3 for the United States and 3 for Japan.

ENGINEERS FAVORABLE TO IDEA OF AN ENLARGED AUDITORIUM

The 11th Engineer units in Port Arthur, "Port Arthur's Own," favors the enlarged auditorium idea.

This was made clear several days ago in a communication addressed to The News, written by Captain A. A. Nicholson of Co. D.

Captain Nicholson agrees that there is a common ground on which the Engineers and various Port Arthur organizations may meet and discuss the affair. He suggests that such a meeting or meetings be early arranged wherein the whole proposition may be ironed out and steps taken accordingly.

Back of the whole proposition lies the fact that Port Arthur has inadequate seating capacities for functions, conventions, meetings, and, not least, for those attractions which by reason of such limited seating capacity make it necessary to make high charges for tickets. If Port Arthur had an auditorium with a seating capacity of 2,000 to 2,500 popular prices could prevail and Port Arthur people could witness some of the best productions being shown anywhere at less than half the price necessary under present conditions.

The problem of finances wouldn't be as difficult as it sounds or as might be imagined, if organizations directly interested, from the standpoint of a better, more progressive Port Arthur, would lend their moral support and influence to a constructive program. Given a popular demand and finances would be no insuperable barrier. Port Arthur is losing more every year, no doubt, than the increase necessary to carry out the enlarged auditorium would total. And there are years ahead to which we must look forward with some organized plan to meet a rapidly growing problem.

It would be a progressive, constructive stroke if some Port Arthur organization would start the ball rolling. This is all that the Engineers now are waiting for. Their plans are in shape. They have taken on a big job among themselves on handling their own proposal, and they will carry it out. But they can't wait too long because their own problem is a pressing one. If other bodies would jump in and help make of the proposal one of community interest it could just as certainly be brought to completion in an enlarged way that not only would care for the present but would be adequate for years to come.

And one of the biggest arguments for the enlarged auditorium proposal is that if steps are taken to carry it through now, it can be done at a fraction of the additional cost that would be necessitated in a new structure a year or several years from now.

DID YOU KNOW

That an eminent scientist says the sun is only three million years old, is yet in its infancy and good for countless generations to supply the people then on earth with light and heat.

That American copper sticks are climbing steadily and that the higher price for the metal and second consumptions at home and abroad are the chief factors.

That New Orleans cotton sharps place the cotton carryover at 254,000 bales less than last year after a world consumption of American cotton of 11,242,000 bales.

That according to the Federal Reserve bank at Kansas City that new wheat money is coming in and the yields are heaviest and returns largest in those sections of Kansas and Oklahoma which last year suffered almost complete failure of wheat because of crop conditions.

That the new wheat is moving into market channels in tremendous volume, much larger than at this time last year and the high price is bringing long hoped for relief to the wheat farmer.

That Australia is a heavy buyer of American merchandise and now stands eighth on the list of all countries to which we export.

That women trained in college are sure to win success as a girl with a diploma usually goes faster and further in business than the girl without one.

That Kansas has harvested a crop of 150,000,000 bushels of wheat, that a corn crop of 122,000,000 bushels was made by the July rains, that the oat crop is a record breaker and at present prices of wheat, corn and oats, the farm income of Kansas for these three crops will be over 300 million dollars or one half greater than last year.

That feeling is better in the steel trade, that July sales were heavier than those in June and that the steel corporations will not contest the Pittsburgh plus order.

That Wall Street bankers have made a loan of twenty-five million dollars to the government of Norway which will bear six per cent interest.

That the production of rubber in the world during the current year is expected to aggregate 421,000 tons and that the United States is expected to take 315,000 tons of the production.

That the American trade in tobacco grows, exports are 200 million dollars a year, imports have a value of 100 million dollars and one third of the world crop is raised in the United States.

That 545 million pounds of tobacco was exported from this country in the year just closed, that world tobacco users sent us $200,000,000 in the past year and $2,500,000,000 in the past twenty-five years.

That it is unlikely competition from new cotton areas in foreign countries will be a serious factor in the world cotton trade in the immediate future.

That Australia has shown a large increase in cotton production during the last few years but the total is only a few thousand bales.

That Egypt has a cotton area of less than 1,800,000 acres and that the only way to produce cotton in the Sudan is to irrigate the land which would rob Upper and Lower Egypt of their annual supply for irrigation purposes.

That $4,500,000 is available for federal aid roads for Texas within the year and that New York comes second with $3,500,000. Texas leads them all.

That George Shires, former justice of the United States Supreme court, is dead and that he was the justice who changed front on the income tax measure in 1894 and in changing his vote made the income tax unconstitutional.

It's hard to shake off the precedent of the past. Old ideas cling and modify new ideas. It is as if man, venturing into the new, fears totally to discard the old; he clings to the old as a life preserver.

But as the new ideas develop, especially new inventions, the old is gradually shaken off. The time may be ripe for the airplane to cease looking like a bird or insect. Who knows?—the final perfection of the airplane may look like a spider, a rat or a rubber ball.

IS COURT PROCEDURE OF AMERICA INFERIOR TO THAT OF ENGLAND?

(The marked difference in the speed with which British courts handle criminal cases and the lethargy which pervades official circles charged with the administration of justice in the United States is brought strikingly to the fore in the comparison by Capt. Brown, an interested observer at the Franks case trial.)

BY E. C. BROWN

On January 12, 1920, the whole of England was startled by a crime so brutal and wanton that it was only comparable with the Franks case here in Chicago.

Nurse Shore, a niece of the justly famous Florence Nightingale, was found in a compartment of a train, bound from London to Hastings, in a fearful condition. She had been attacked brutally—almost killed. As a matter of fact she dies three days later, but—

Before she died, I was arrested, and formally charged with an attempt at murder. When she died that charge was changed and I found myself facing the gallows.

The crime was committed Monday afternoon and I was arrested the following evening. No evidence as to the criminal was left except that several persons had seen a young man about thirty years of age, clean shaven, about 5 feet 8 inches in height, of slim build and wearing a brown suit, a brown overcoat, and brown shoes, enter the same compartment. Nurse Shore occupied on her fatal journey.

Answers the Description

Answering that description of the wanted man cost me two weeks of incarceration in an English jail.

I was cautioned when arrested that anything that I might say would be taken down in writing and could be used in evidence against me at my trial. At the same time I was told by the police inspector who was in charge of the case, that I had no need to answer any questions that would tend to incriminate me in any way.

This is one of the things which has made British justice famous.

I could account every movement from the time I arrived in London from Glasgow to my arrival at the police station, but there was a time I could not account for, off-hand, and it was during that time the murder was committed.

Later, I was able to establish my alibi and was quite promptly freed.

How different, however, in the Franks case. These young men not only confessed and pleaded guilty, but their lawyers admit they are guilty, but they have accounted in the most amazing manner for every moment consumed in the actual commission of the crime!

Impossible in England

Their attorneys, admitting they are not insane, plead "mitigating circumstances." How ridiculous such a plea would be in England.

But, to get back to my story.

Things were very black for me, especially after I was remanded by the magistrate on the following morning for a period of seven days. Here is one point of difference between the two laws. In the English courts a person is not allowed by law to plead guilty to a charge of murder.

At the end of the seven days, during which I was remanded, however, I was brought up in court again to hear what evidence the police had accumulated against me.

In the meantime I had managed to think where I was at the fatal time of the crime, so I was released.

First, though, I laid the case before the court and was remanded for a further week to allow the police to investigate my statements.

Now here is where the Franks case could not have taken place in Britain, by this I do not mean the murder but the trial.

First: the prisoners would not have been allowed to plead guilty.

Second: the case would have been over in less than a week.

Third: The crown never appears vindictive, as in the case here; the death penalty is never demanded by the crown for the simple reason if the jury finds a person guilty of murder, the judge has no option but to pronounce the death sentence. After the sentence of the court has been passed, only the king can commute that sentence to one of penal servitude for life.

Cannot Plead Mitigation

Fourth: If a person is insane the case would be over in a few minutes and the murderer would be committed to a criminal lunatic asylum.

Fifth: Never more than twenty persons are called upon for jury action.

When the jury has been sworn in a sane person pleads "not guilty" and an insane person is not allowed to plead. The prison doctor states that the accused is unfit to plead and the case for the crown is ended. Only sufficient evidence is submitted to the court to show that the accused is the guilty person.

The crime of which I was accused is one of the few which to this day is unsolved and when Chief Detective Inspector Hague of Scotland Yard retired some fifteen months ago, he said that while they were unable to provide the satisfaction of a jury that a man since dead had committed the crime, he himself was convinced of it.

In New York

NEW YORK, Sept. 6.—Chop-suey is being given its first place in the midnight sun on Broadway.

The aristocratic Palais Royale, where Paul Whiteman jazzed to fame, Maurice and Hughes danced to "bits" and "abs," and where an autocratic head waiter inspected the social register before admitting prospective guests, is to be a Chinese restaurant.

Silenced waiters will replace the howling and scraping servants of former days, and monogrammed linen, silver and china will be replaced with the flowered variety of table pottery and cutlery.

The Palais Royale, probably the best-known and the most popular of New York's supper clubs was padlocked some months ago, along with seven others for alleged violations of the Volstead act. It was intimated at the time that despite high prices which were charged that every one of the establishments were losing money. No attempt was made to reopen them after government officials closed them.

Four brothers entering New York in their automobiles in which they were returning from a tour to the coast, were injured when their car was wrecked by a truck.

They ain't had a single mishap on their long transcontinental journey. Which only proves, you never can tell.

Edward Cleary, posing as a deaf mute to sell porous plaster, picked a dandy place to display his wares. It was a picnic of mutes.

"Well, I guess you've got the goods on me," were the first words he spoke after police officers had examined him for five days.

"Thirty days," said the judge—and Cleary heard him.

RURAL TEACHERS PLAN FOR SCHOOL OPENING

BEAUMONT, Texas, Sept. 6.—More than 70 rural school teachers met here this morning, at which time plans for the coming session were outlined under the direction of Miss Mary Sandall, county school superintendent. J. M. Nation, superintendent of the Sabine Pass school and R. C. Greer, principal of the Nederland school both made addresses during the session.

any doubt they've had the coming election in mind in connection with their past activities. They'll have the 1924 election in mind when this year's is over. The president won't be at stake then, but the control of congress will.

Bloes

A lot of fault has been found with blocs in the senate and house, but defenders of the system are beginning to come to the front. Suppose, these defenders say, a bad bill comes up under the two-party system.

The representatives of the party back of it support it solidly, though many of them may disapprove of it, the bill is good. One side opposes it solidly, regardless of its merits, but because the other side fathered it.

Bloes, say their defenders, may have each some individual bloc interest, but on other questions they are likelier to vote conscientiously. However, under the United States constitution, anything but the two-party system is mighty inconvenient when it comes to electing a president.

Sugar

President Coolidge, back in the White House, his vacation over, still hasn't decided what to do about the sugar tariff.

It is estimated that the delay has now cost consumers around 15 millions since the tariff commission told the president the rate ought to be lowered.

What's Going on In the World

By CHARLES P. STEWART
NEA Service Writer

Persons who knew the Prince of Wales more or less 8 or 10 years ago and have just seen him again say he isn't quite as lovable as he used to be. He was a rather shy, wholly unassuming, very friendly boy.

Today, at 30, he's lost his shyness. His air is sophisticated. Bored, too. No doubt it is tiresome to have to be always on dress parade. If so, the prince didn't use to show it. Now he does.

He's pettish almost when stared at or interfered with, which is most of the time. Once he was just a boy. He's a prince today. Up stage. Very much so. More so in this country than at home, some say.

More Interesting

Congressional investigations promise to break out worse than ever right after election. The campaign has tied them up. Even the Couzens treasury inquiry had to be postponed while the senator fights to keep his seat in the upper house.

Also the Daugherty committee's principal members are very busy. Senator Brookhart campaigning to hang onto his Iowa toga; Senator Wheeler for the vice presidency.

Inside Out

But this doesn't mean the investigations have been dropped. Senators Brookhart and Wheeler have better reasons than ever—personal reasons—since George Remus' repudiation of his previous testimony against the Daugherty group, for hammering home their case.

The delay in the Couzens inquiry was a puzzle at first, but now it comes out that Couzens has a stiff fight in Michigan and wants his hands free until election. But even if he loses, he still will have all winter to turn the internal revenue department inside out, and news comes from Detroit that that's what he means to do, win or lose.

Though, of course, the investigators deny political motives, there isn't

Caldwell Files Motion For New Drainage Trial

Special to The News.
BEAUMONT, Texas, Sept. 6.—Motion for a new trial in the case of Dr. L. E. Caldwell of Port Arthur against the Port Arthur Gas company was filed in 58th district court here today by A. Duperier, attorney for Dr. Caldwell.

Judge O'Brien denied yesterday that a gas company had the right to cut off a gas supply at either a home or residence if the gas bill was not paid at either place. The gas was cut off at Dr. Caldwell's office on account of a bill at the Caldwell home, over which there was some misunderstanding. Since he had paid the bill at the office he contended that this should not have been cut off.

Nine Bills Charge Gates With Forgery

Special to The News.
BEAUMONT, Texas, Sept. 6.—Bond of $500 each on nine cases was fixed this morning by Judge George C. O'Brien following a habeas corpus hearing for Elbert Gates, arrested in Port Arthur last week. Nine true bills charging Gates with forgery were returned by the grand jury Friday afternoon when they adjourned. Following the return of these bills, the grand jury recessed and will not meet again until Monday morning. The present session will close next Saturday.

Guidrez, Sam Bertolino, Mahell Anderson and T. S. Poladino, all of Port Arthur, who were indicted on a charge of robbery by firearms last week, will be tried at that time.

Judge O'Brien announced yesterday that the Whitney Norris murder case also be called on September 15, and other cases set will be taken up at the completion of the Norris hearing.

In addition to these cases, 24 others have been set for the week of September 15. Seven persons charged with felony theft will be tried, and there are a number of liquor law violation cases.

ROB 40 HOMES NO ONE AWAKE

Two Men Go Through Town, Escape With Spoils

LEXINGTON, Ky., Sept. 6.—A closed car carrying three men drove into Salt Lick, Bath county, 50 miles east of here, the other night. The three men looked about. The town's only man police force was not in sight.

While one man drove the car and kept watch, the other two entered 40 homes as they came to them, and robbed them all. Then the three went away.

That is the story told here by Capt. V. G. Mullikin, who was summoned from Lexington with his bloodhounds. The hounds were taken first to the home of T. B. Stagg, who had been relieved of $40. Stagg was picked up there that led to a nearby place, where, Capt. Mulligan said, the robbers probably entered their automobile. The dogs were unable to carry the trail farther.

His Pocket Cleaned Out

The dogs were taken in turn to other houses, but the trails were too cold to follow, so Capt. Mulligan came home with his hounds.

Stagg, a lumberman, arose next morning after the robbers' call to find his money had been removed from his trousers in the night. When he began telling of his loss it developed that 30 other houses had been entered, and that small amounts of silver, knives, cigarettes and other articles taken.

After news of the wholesale thefts became known the town bank, at an early hour was besieged by citizens carrying in for deposits varying amounts of currency and coin.

Hidden Money Brought Out

Tales of hidden stores of money, hurried to light as the owners hurried to the bank to deposit the funds in the vault, became current.

A telephone mechanic told later that when installing a 'phone the day after the robbery, he saw an occupant of the dwelling counting on the floor a pile of bills a foot high. Asked what he intended to do with the money, the owner is said to have exclaimed: "Take it to the bank!" No trace of the miscreants has been found, and how the robbers managed to enter 40 houses without waking up any of the occupants is a mystery.

C.-C. Opposes Franchise To Santa Fe Railroad

Special to The News.
BEAUMONT, Texas, Sept. 6.—A meeting of the traffic department of the Chamber of Commerce was held this morning at which time that organization went on record as being opposed to the granting of a franchise to the Santa Fe railroad, where by they will be permitted to build a connecting link with the city wharves. At a first reading of the motion to grant the franchise to the Santa Fe by the city commission last Tuesday night, the proposition carried, and local interests are making an effort to block its final passage.

GROCER REPORTS ROBBERY OF STORE

BEAUMONT, Texas, September 6.—Theft of a quantity of groceries was reported to local police here today by C. C. Sellers, 180 Seventh street. Sellers said that the thief entered his home sometime Sunday first and stole potatoes, rice and sugar. Several days later the cellar was broken into and five quarts of fish preserves were stolen.

NECHES BRIDGE TO BE READY JAN. 1

BEAUMONT, Texas, September 6.—The new $500,000 Neches river bridge will be completed and ready for use by the first of the year, according to County Engineer A. C. Love. FORD CAR STOLEN

Special to The News.
BEAUMONT, Texas, Sept. 6.—Theft of a 1924 model Ford touring car, practically new was reported to police here by Pete Fertitta, 1072 Park street. The car had been parked on Main street here last night and was stolen about 10 o'clock.

INVITING DEATH

Here's a beautiful baby, in excellent health. The proud mother exhibits him to visitors. Their instant tendency is to take hold of the baby's fingers. They do not realize danger of transferring germs.

Within a few seconds after baby's fingers have been pawed by grown-ups, his fingers go to his mouth.

This is one of the commonest ways germ of colds and other diseases get into baby's system.

Lucky for the baby, if visitors toy with his fingers outdoors. Mother is naturally afraid to offend by cautioning about transfer of germs. If she is wise, she will expose his fingers to the sunlight.

Germs die almost instantly in sunlight.

And, by the way, one of the best remedies for a sore throat is to open your mouth so the sun will shine into the infected parts.

More disease germs are "caught" by contact with the hands than any other way. Except, possibly, kissing. The danger is especially acute when there is a cut or a chapped crack in the skin of the hands.

The League Against Hand Shaking is doing excellent work.

Hand shaking, after all, is rather a ridiculous custom. It's a stupid survival of the days when men extended their right hand to instill confidence by showing they carried no weapon.

BIG PT. NECHES SCHOOL OPENED

Week of School Shows Large Enrollment

PORT NECHES, Texas, Sept. 6.—With the biggest faculty, highest number of units and one of the best school buildings of its kind in the state, the Port Neches public school opened its ninth month term last Monday, Sept. 1 with all departments enrolling except the kindergarten.

The kindergarten work will begin this Monday under the direction of Miss Lottie D. Hicks, a week's postponement being necessary because of her illness. When this department reports and all names are in, Supt. J. H. Hicks states the largest enrollment in the history of the school will be recorded.

The increased enrollment will be due to the adding of an additional bus line which is this term bringing in pupils from the surrounding refinery neighborhoods.

A total of 22 teachers beside the superintendent and music instructor are on the faculty this year. These have all done special work in their respective lines, practically all going to universities during the vacation months for special work. A total of 24 units of work, more than double that of last year, is offered this year through efforts of Prof. Hicks who this summer in Austin secured the higher affiliation credits.

The past week has been spent for the most part, in classification, signing up for text book and preliminary getting ready and real work will begin in earnest Monday, Hicks states. Athletic work will also start Monday, is the plan now.

Following is list of faculty members this year:

Prof. J. H. Hicks, principal; C. O. Wilson, G. E. Medley, Hansford Quarles, Misses Mary Louise Moore, Georgia Morgan, Betty Allgood, Trilzie Johnson, Bernice Fountain, Lucy Scott, Julia McMeans, Miriam Windle, Wylene McMeans, Nannie Lou Wynn, Pearl Helms, Lottie D. Hicks, Jewel Walters and Cynthia Gregory; Mesdames Adia Hicks, E. E. McDonald, Virginia Boone, Louise Price and E. W. Ephlin.

DESERTED CISTERN IS SWIMMING HOLE

PORT NECHES, Sept. 6.—As a negro seeks a place in the sun, so does young America seek out his swimming hole, this time being a deserted cistern in the rear of the vacant Hander building on Dallas avenue.

EBERHARD HIT HARD IN FIRST

PORT ARTHUR'S best will contend on Lakeshore diamond this afternoon when the Athletics meet the Elks in the first of a scheduled three-game series for the city baseball title. Today's game will be called at 3:30.

Pitching selections for today's game have not been announced, but the Athletics last night both are expecting a good crowd. Both teams claim they have lost money in furnishing baseball amusement for Port Arthur this summer, and are hoping to pull over the well-known kump in these final chances in which road expenses are eliminated. Absolutely no free list will be allowed today, it was said last night.

Players Unchanged
The two lineups today will be much the same as have performed for the combatants in the past. For the Athletics the infield will be composed of Morgan, Hooker, Aldinger, and Perkins, with the facetious Jimmy Bell catching. In the outfield there will be available Jordan, Hase, Earhart and Hutchinson.

For the Elks Vance will be catching again, or possibly Smith will be doing the muck work. Rusty Davis will be on first, with Homero on second. Iglesias will show his snappy fielding in the short field, while Corley may hold down third. Again, Smith may take the hot corner. Fulbright and Andy Traut will be showing their peerless wares in the outfield once more.

Richard Says Bars Opened For Firpo Fisticuffs With Court Hearing Next Week

NEW YORK, Sept. 6.—Clearing the last of the legal material obstacles, Richard announced this afternoon that the Firpo-Willis heavyweight fight, scheduled for next Thursday night in Jersey City is positively on.

In answer to a warrant that was issued for his arrest in Washington on a charge of committing perjury before the New York immigration authorities, Firpo appeared voluntarily at Ellis Island this afternoon and was released in $1,000 bail for a hearing September 15.

Bill Mehlhorn, St. Louis, Wins Western Open Title With 293 for 72 Holes

CALUMET COUNTRY CLUB, HOMEWOOD, Ill., Sept. 6.—"Wild Bill" Mehlhorn, of St. Louis, won the western open golf championship here today with a score of 293 for 72 holes of play, beating the record-breaking field of 216 players.

Al Waltrous, Grand Rapids, Michigan, landed second place with a score of 301, eight strokes behind the leader.

Mehlhorn shot consistent golf. His first round was the worst of the four. Mehlhorn took a 70 on the opening 18. His next was a 70, the third a 74 and the final round this afternoon was negotiated in 73. Waltrous made a desperate attempt to cut down Mehlhorn's lead but he faltered on the last 18, which he made in 77.

The amateurs took third and fourth places. Chick Evans landed third with 302 and Eddie Held, St. Louis, took fourth with 303.

Three players tied for fifth place honors—Leo Diegel of Washington, Jack Burke of St. Paul, and Al Espinoza of Chicago, 304.

The tragedy of the meet was Chick Evans today. Had the former champion been able to sink half of his putts that rimmed the cup, he would have been the one to whom the silverware was awarded when

Gray Years Mean Nothing To Hurlers Out In Seattle

NEW YORK, Sept. 6.—Youth must be served, is an old sport adage of much truth, but it doesn't go, out in the great open spaces.

Veteran pitchers, former big league stars, are making a pennant contender out of Seattle in the Pacific Coast League.

"Whizzer" Dell, late of Brooklyn; Jim Bagby, who last toiled with Pittsburgh and previous to that starred for Cleveland, and Van Greig, long regarded as through, are keeping Seattle in the running.

Perhaps it is the climate.

Ten years ago Greig was the big name at Cleveland, a second Babe Waddell in ability, also possessing a few of the late Rule's eccentricities.

Greig at 40, after practically having retired from the game because of a lame arm, is doing one of baseball's greatest comebacks. He is the pitching sensation of the coast league.

Only the other day the New York Yankees were reported to have offered two players and a big sum for Greig, provided immediate delivery could be given. The offer was turned down.

In 1920 Jim Bagby won 31 games for Cleveland. The Indians won the pennant that year. Bagby played a leading role.

Tavener Only Loss From Cats Next Year

FORT WORTH, Sept. 6.—Chances are the Fort Worth, Texas, league club, which is about to clinch its fifth straight pennant, will lose only "Peewee" Tavener from its 1924 makeup.

Four or five clubs are bidding for the little shortstop, and he's bound to go up.

"We haven't put a price on Tavener because we want players rather than money," Atz said.

Atz would not disclose the names of the teams bidding for the shortstop, nor any terms that have been offered.

When the Knockout Punch Lands!
This Diagram With the Much-Knocked-Out Mr. Fred Fulton Posing, Shows the Nerve Tract Traveled by the Dream Punch in Fistiana

Here is what actually happens to a man when he is knocked "cold" in the prize ring. When the lower jaw is struck on its point—or button—with a sharp punch, the upper angle of the jaw is driven forcibly into the glenoid cavity of the skull, above and behind which is situated the delicate labyrinth of the inner ear.

This explains why a sideways blow on the jaw is more effective as a knockout than one delivered flush on the point of the jaw. The full shock of a sideways blow is received in the glenoid cavity, while the shock of a blow in the center is divided between the cavities on the two sides.

Football Same Bridges Says

New Rules Revived By Baylor Coach

WACO, Texas, Sept. 6.—The two principal changes in football rules this year will have very little effect on the game, according to head coach Frank Bridges of Baylor University. The main changes are the removal of the kickoff tee and the moving of the kickoff to the 50-yard line.

"The kicker can get as much distance with a man holding the ball as if he had a tee, in my estimation," declared Bridges. "Rule 8 on the kickoff declares the side having the kickoff shall kick off from the middle of the field or any point directly behind it. Section 2 of this rule declares the opponents shall be behind their own 40-yard line until the ball is kicked."

"According to that rule you can bring your kickoff back to the 40-yard line thereby putting 20 yards between you and your opponents. The change in the rule makes it optional whether you want to kick off from the middle of the field."

Short Kickoff Unaffected

"By bringing the ball back to the 40-yard line for the kickoff, the short kickoff used by Baylor several times last year would nearly be a certain success every time attempted."

"The change in the 5-yard line to the 3-yard line in the try-for-point after touchdown rule will not make much change. The object of the officials was to open up the game down near the goal line. I believe that the value of a touchdown should be made more than six points, because in my estimation 3 field goals are equal to the value of 1 touchdown."

"The new rule regarding the wearing of stiff shoulder guards may bring some trouble, as sporting goods houses failed to take notice of the new rule and made all guards as heretofore. However, the Baylor shoulder guards will be padded on the outside as well as the inside."

Pirates In Second As Giants Meet Robins Today

GIANTS, ROBINS DIVIDE PAIRS

Pittsburg Grabs Two From Cardinals

NEW YORK, Sept. 6.—Pittsburg and Brooklyn are today bunched so closely that one can't be distinguished from the other in the top of the National league heap. New York and Brooklyn both stood off yesterday and split doubleheaders, but Pittsburg made hay while the sun shone, doing nothing less than cop two from St. Louis. The double win slipped the Pirates back into second place, just half a hair or so ahead of the Dodgers. In the meantime the "Joins" clung to the leadership with a drowning man's desperation.

Fighting games are in sight for today and tomorrow when New York and Brooklyn meet, while Pittsburg takes on Cincinnati.

In the American league yesterday left the situation unchanged. The three contenders—Yankees, Senators and Tigers—all won their games and left their relative standings unchanged.

CREAM SUNDAE RUINED PITCHER

Walter Johnson Loses His Pineapple

Ball players are perhaps less careful as to their diet than any other class of athletes. This goes for the star as well as the rookie.

Recently for seven innings Walter Johnson held Chicago to four hits and no runs. His great pitching had the crowd thrilled. It looked as if he would surely add another shut-out to his long string.

When Washington went to the field in the eighth inning Johnson was missing from the picture. Fred Marberry was on the rubber for the Nationals.

Most of the fans figured something serious must have happened to Johnson's arm, for at the close of the seventh inning he looked unhittable.

Others thought that probably Manager Harris was of the opinion that he had tired and it was wise to send in a fresh pitcher. The day was hot and Johnson, with only a two-run lead, was forced to extend himself at all times.

As a matter of fact, Johnson was removed because he suffered a sudden attack of indigestion that made it unwise to permit him to continue pitching.

Johnson likes his ice cream. Indulgence in about a pint of it about a half hour before game time caused all the trouble.

Prior to the start of the game I noticed one of the clubhouse boys passing the door of our dressing room, with a tall glass full of ice cream and covered with luxurious shredded pineapple.

Being rather fond of ice cream myself, I remarked to the boy that he needn't go any further.

"This is for Walter Johnson," replied the youngster. "He told me to hurry back."

That wonderful looking pineapple sundae an hour later caused plenty of trouble for Johnson and for a time threatened to throw a jolt into Washington's pennant chances.

The Nationals won the contest, 2 to 1, but a break of the game, an unassisted double play on a line drive to the first baseman, saved the day, when it looked as if Chicago might win.

Walter Johnson insists that he has learned a lesson, that never again will he indulge so short a time before play.

The lesson Johnson says he has learned could be used to advantage by 90 per cent of big league athletes. It is a habit of players to eat and drink prior to game time, with ice cream, soft drinks and "hot dogs" as the favorite forms of dissipation.

A college trainer would have a fit at the methods employed by big league players as to their diet.

It is a well-known fact that many a recruit player, with a chance to be a star, has literally eaten himself out of the big show.

Baseball trainers claim that it is impossible to regulate the diet of an athlete too closely over a strenuous campaign of six months, as is the case with the national pastime.

You don't have to go in swimming to have a shark pull your leg.

Raspberries Worry Firpo Into Staleness for Fight Thursday With Big Wills

By JOE WILLIAMS

SARATOGA SPRINGS, N. Y., Sept. 6.—Louis Firpo will go into his fight with Harry Wills at Boyle's Thirty Acres Sept. 11 mentally and physically under par, and it is no cinch that he will win, despite a preponderance of expert opinion to the contrary.

If it weren't for the knowledge that the folks back home have their idolatrous eyes focused on his bulging biceps, the Argentinian would fling the other blue shirt in a handbag and board the next tub for that dear old Buenos Aires.

It isn't that Firpo feels he made an indiscreet contract in agreeing to battle the solemn Senegambian or that he fears the outcome of the fight.

Firpo has just about crashed under the steady hammering of religious and government authorities who are seeking his deportation because of his simultaneous arrival in this country with a blond senorita.

As much as Firpo values the succulent American dollar it would suit him just as well if the fight were off.

Mental Attitude Wrong

Firpo's mental attitude is all wrong for a fighter who is about to step into the ring with a formidable opponent. Always he asks, "What's the news from Washington?" Never does he ask, "What's the news from Wills' camp?"

This attitude is plainly reflected in his training. There is no fire or fury in his work against Bill Tate or Jack Townsend, colored sparring partners, and as a result he has looked stale and unimpressive.

The customers who gather here at the foot of the rugged Adirondacks to see him work are unrestrained and at times, even coarse in their critical observations.

They laugh boisterously at the bull's awkward swings and sprinkle the air with raucous shouts when he runs flush into a right or left hand swing, which is often.

Plenty of Raspberries

Such delightful drolleries as "if you're a fighter, I'm a watchmaker," "how did you ever knock Dempsey out of the ring?" rise up from the ringside to greet the puffing giant as he paws unceremoniously at his paid help.

With Firpo's mental moroseness has come a sharp let-down in his physical preparation. I was with him for four days and not once did he don the woollens and go out on the road for a matutinal jaunt. One day he slept until mid-afternoon, dining in bed. Another day he did not emerge from his cottage until 4 o'clock, the time of his public sparring.

Naturally, Firpo's trainers are alarmed. Still they are hopeful. They point out that he is moody, like most Latins.

The fight is still several days off. Firpo may yet snap out of his stupor and toe the mark in an eager, belated frame of mind.

If he doesn't, the next heavyweight championship match will be between Jack Dempsey, in this corner, gentlemen, and Harry Wills, in that corner.

WESTERN GIRL LOSES OUT, 7-6

Mrs. Hurd Spoils Glory For Miss Browne

NAYATT, R. I., Sept. 6.—Miss Mary K. Browne, California tennis and golf star, lost a chance to fill the role of a fiction heroine of sports here this afternoon when she was defeated by Mrs. Dorothy Campbell Hurd, Philadelphia, in the final round of the national women's golf championship. The score was 7 and 6.

The national tennis champion of 1912, 1913, and 1914 and a semifinalist in the recent Forest Hills tennis tournament missed the chance to make new history by winning two major championships but she did reach the fiction point of becoming a semifinalist in the tennis and golf championships the same year. No one ever did such in the past.

Shows Tennis Courage

No such form and brilliance that had favored the California woman in her match against Miss Glenna Collett, the former national champion, in the semi-final round yesterday was at her call today.

Just as much responsibility for her defeat, however, was the refusal of her steady opponent to blow up as the young former champion did yesterday when Miss Browne pulled several startling shots.

At the end of the morning round of 18 holes, the California star was down six. With the same courage she exhibited in Forest Hills when she carried the contest to Miss Wills, Miss Browne kept trying but her game was not compared to that of her opponent today and Mrs. Hurd gained two holes for the first nine of the afternoon round and was seven up at the turn. She maintained the lead until they reached the thirteenth hole where the Californian dropped her clubs and warmly congratulated the winner.

Says She'll Learn

"Shucks, I don't know much about golf," Miss Browne said. "I've only played the game two years and I haven't got the swing yet. I knew I was making a lot of mistakes but I didn't know what to do about them. I would know how to get out of a slump on the court but I don't know enough about this game."

The return to championship class of Mrs. Hurd was even more sensational than the comeback which Miss Browne worked in tennis this season.

Mrs. Hurd as Dorothy Campbell held the championship twice before in 1909 and 1910, before Miss Browne had become adept at either tennis or golf.

Paddock Hits Old Stride To Capture 100 and 250 In World's Record Time

WEST ORANGE, N. J., Sept. 6.—Charley Paddock, former clip of the sprinters, came back to his glory here this afternoon when he won the 100-yard dash from Loren Murchison in 9 3-5 seconds and took the 250-yard dash in 20 4-5 seconds, both world's records.

Paddock was helped by a brisk wind at his back but it was not enough to overcome the handicap of a track that was extremely heavy and slow from yesterday's rain.

The team champion of the A. A. U. meet was won by the Illinois Athletic club with a total of 43 points. The New York Athletic Club was second with 33 points and the Newark Athletic Club was third with 31 points.

Michigan to Resume Relations With Illini

ANN ARBOR, Mich., Sept. 6.—"Beat the Suckers," is the slogan that will be preached to candidates of the Michigan football eleven when training begins September 15.

Michigan will meet Illinois October 18 at the Illini playing field. The Wolverines will help dedicate the new stadium. Michigan and Illinois went through with clean slates last fall. They were knotted for the Big Ten bunting, just as they were back in 1918. This year the two rivals will resume football relations after a two-year lapse. They will take up hostilities where they left off in 1922, when the Ann Arbor boys administered one of the worst beatings a Zuppke-coached eleven has ever received.

Here are six strong aggregations the Rockne lads will meet in a dizzy row. Moreover, four of them will be on hostile gridirons, Georgia Tech and Nebraska being the lone home contests.

Cyclops Makes Statement To Public

HOUSTON, Sept. 6.—Sam Houston Klan No. 1 will henceforth take no part in politics, city or state.

Sam T. McClure, elected cyclops of the local chapter of the hooded order last Thursday, made this statement tonight.

McClure, well known church worker, declared that he was working to make Houston a better place to live. "The Klan is for the best in all things and as long as I am at the head of the Houston chapter the organization will take no part in politics. It will be purely a secret fraternal order."

Sam Houston Klan will have an entirely new set of officers, McClure said. Affairs of the chapter will be made public insofar as other secret fraternal orders publish their activities.

LIBRARY TO BE OPEN SUNDAYS

Former Custom Resumed Starting Today

Beginning today the Memorial Library will be open from 2 to 5 each Sunday afternoon as has been the custom the past few years with the exception of the three summer months. Miss Mary Donaldson, librarian, announces.

Miss Donaldson states each year has seen marked increase in the number of those taking advantage of Sunday afternoon for reading and research which the busy week days do not afford.

New books—as many as the book fund will permit—are being constantly purchased. The following recent additions are an indication of the wide variety of up-to-date books to be had at the library: Marks' "Mechanical Engineers' Handbook," 1924 edition, Lippincott's "Outdoor Advertising," the Scientific American's "Home Owner's Handbook," Dibble's "Plumber's Handbook," Coulter's "Where Religion and Evolution Meet," George Bernard Shaw's "Saint Joan," Milne's "In a Shanting Garden," Kathleen Norris' "Rose of the World," and Temple Bailey's "Peacock Feathers."

That the people of Port Arthur are becoming increasingly aware of the vast amount of pleasure and information to be had from the library is proven by the large circulation, the circulation for the last six months being great in excess of the previous years.

The library is open from nine a. m. to nine p. m. every day except Sunday, and Sundays from two to five p. m.

GARMENT PLANT

company will be chosen. It is believed probable that Ed Lohmann, who directed the campaign to secure the money, George M. Craig of the Merchants National bank, and Travis Holland of the First National bank will be among those who will be chosen temporary trustees.

West will be in from Little Rock probably this week or the first of next. Borge states, West subscribed $35,000 cash to the garment factory before leaving here. He was given the option of placing $15,500 more.

Everything in the plant will be new. West is expected to be chosen president and manager of the concern when the company is organized. West stated while here he desired that his board of directors be composed of a majority of Port Arthur men. West will move here with his family and is placing his business future in the Port Arthur venture, business men here say.

New Buildings Probable

West brings 32 years practical experience as a garment manufacturer, starting in the game when a youth. The plant will begin with approximately 125 workers aside from the office personnel. This will be increased to a 200 minimum within a short time, the manufacturer said.

A proper location is the first thing to be decided in establishing the factory. It is possible now buildings will be erected if one necessary for the plant can not be secured. West and business men and others in the venture do not propose to start out the factory under a building handicap, as enough capital stock has been raised to assure funds to make adequate location possible, it is said.

Securing the garment factory has been in actuality only a matter of less than a month. The idea has been tentative with the Chamber industrial committee in communication with West for about three months. The manufacturer, after looking over a number of propositions submitted by southern cities for his proposed plant, finally decided he would come either to Port Arthur or Shreveport.

Coming to both places he conferred with the business interests. He was impressed with Port Arthur's advantages from several standpoints, he said. First, Port Arthur with its large industrial population afforded within itself a big market for a garment factory output in its midst. Knowing he could manufacture work clothes as good and deliver them much cheaper to the Port Arthur consumer, West said he was assured of a paying proposition from a purely local field. The labor situation here was ideal with plenty of female labor right here ready to go to work, he said.

Regulations for Opening Of Schools Sept. 15 Announced

Registration To Begin Tuesday, Sept. 9 and Continue In Various Departments Through Monday Sept. 15

School opening, one week away, is the talk of the day for younger Port Arthurians.

Little tots looking forward eagerly to kindergarten, boys and girls starting to school this year for the first time, and the hosts of larger boys and girls to whom school opening means another year on the road to diplomas, all are thinking in terms of school.

Teachers and school officials are gathering in the city for the last minute details that have to be cleared away before the armies of school children flock into the buildings for classification. At the High school registration will start next Tuesday, September 9, Lynn B. Davis, the new principal of the High school, set forth Saturday in an outline of school opening plans.

Registration Schedule

Here's the line-up for High school students to follow:

All registration will begin at 8 o'clock each day, and 1 o'clock in the afternoon, at the High school.

Tuesday, September 9, pupils who have never attended any of the schools in Port Arthur and who plan to attend the High school this coming session will see Principal Davis in his office.

Thursday morning, September 11, low seniors will register, and that afternoon, high seniors and high juniors.

Low juniors will register Friday morning, September 12, and high sophomores, Friday afternoon.

Monday afternoon, September 15, low sophomores will register, and high freshmen will register that afternoon.

Students in the eighth and higher grades will be in the High school.

"The compulsory attendance law requiring every child eight years of age and not more than 14 years of age to attend school, is effective from the opening of school, Monday, September 15," George M. Sims, superintendent of the schools, said Saturday.

Kindergarten Enrollments

Kindergarten and first grade children must enroll during the first two weeks of school, the kindergartens being open to any child who has become six years of age on or before September 1, 1924, providing parents fill out age certificates to this effect.

Age certificates will be required of all children who have not become seven years of age on or before the first of this month, according to a statement from Superintendent Sims.

Use of the Memorial Library by school children for school purposes after 5 o'clock in the afternoon, and social activities during the school week are discouraged by school authorities, but studying at night on the part of the students, especially those in the fifth and higher grades, study periods to range from one to three hours, is encouraged, the superintendent set forth. Report cards will be issued during the 1924-25 session every six weeks.

In establishing division lines between the schools, the school authorities do not object to parents sending their children to other buildings unless an overcrowded condition develops, in which event the right is reserved to readjust the class units according to the division lines given under every building.

Classification regulations for Franklin, DeQueen, Griffing, Lamar and Lincoln school students have been drawn up as follows:

Franklin School

Students living south of Stilwell boulevard, including West Port Arthur, who classify in the fifth, sixth and seventh grades will report to the Franklin building. Children living between Stilwell boulevard and the Kansas City Southern tracks classifying in the third and lower grades will report to Franklin.

Mr. Collins, principal of the Franklin school, makes the following announcement:

All classification will take place on Monday, September 15, between the hours of 8 a. m. and 3 p. m.

Children belonging in the kindergarten and low and high first grades will report to the Webster building. All kindergarten and high first children will report between the hours of 8 a. m. and 10 a. m. All pupils belonging to low first will report between the hours of 10 a. m. and 12 noon.

All grades between the second and seventh inclusive will report to the Franklin building, between the hours of 8 a. m. and 12 noon.

Grades two to four inclusive, both boys and girls, will report to the girls' gymnasium for classification.

Grades five, six and seven, both boys and girls, will report to the boys' gymnasium for classification.

Children will receive their schedules and will report to school Tuesday morning according to schedules which they receive.

All new pupils from other schools must bring their report cards for the last year they attended school, and also their book cards if they have attended school in Texas.

Tuesday will be spent in distributing textbooks and assigning lessons. Classes proper will begin Wednesday morning.

DeQueen School

Children living between the center of Stilwell boulevard and the Beaumont road classifying in the high seventh or lower grades will report to the DeQueen building. Those living on the Dryden road, in Griffing and the Pear Ridge communities classifying in the fourth, fifth, sixth and seventh grades will report to DeQueen.

Mr. Davis, principal of the DeQueen building, makes the following announcements concerning new students:

Kindergarten, first and second grades will enroll in the kindergarten building at 9 a. m. Thursday, September 11.

The third, fourth and fifth grades will enroll in the office at 9 a. m. Thursday, September 11.

The sixth and seventh grades will enroll in the office at 1 p. m. Thursday, September 11.

Students who have been classified in DeQueen will report Monday morning, September 15.

Griffing

Children living in the Griffing vicinity classifying in the high third grade and lower grades will report to the Griffing building on Monday morning, September 15. Parents of children who should classify in the Griffing school who prefer to send them to the downtown schools may do so, provided the expense of transportation is taken care of by the parents.

Lamar

Children classifying in the third and lower grades, living in the Lamar vicinity, will report to this building on the morning of the 15.

Children in the El Vista vicinity will report according to the schedules given for Franklin and high schools.

Lincoln

All colored children throughout the district will report to the Lincoln building the morning of September 15.

STATE HIGHWAY MEET SEPT. 22

Will Perfect State - Wide Maintenance Law

WACO, Texas, Sept. 6.—The third annual convention of the Texas Highway association will be held in Houston Monday, September 22, at the Rice hotel. It was announced here Saturday by W. V. Crawford, president.

Notice of the meeting is being sent to the 6,000 members which represent 317 affiliated cities and towns. Due to the importance of the matters to come before the convention, Crawford anticipates the largest attendance in the history of the association.

Chief among the matters scheduled for consideration at the convention, according to President Crawford, is the adoption of a highway program to be recommended to the Twenty-ninth Legislature which will convene in Austin next January. Measures are to be submitted which will fill the state's legislative needs, as far as highways are concerned, for some years to come.

Adoption of these measures will be sought by the association through the passage of bills and highway amendments to the constitution, Crawford announced. Crawford also stated that it is the purpose of the association to complete its "platform of purposes" within a year. When this is done, he declared, Texas will have one of the best sets of highway laws of any state in the Union.

In speaking of the association's legislative program Crawford called attention to the fact that the last session of the legislature passed more constructive highway measures than probably all prior thirty-seven sessions of that body.

Some of the most important laws passed by the thirty-eighth legislature have been contested in the courts, notably the state-wide maintenance law. It was on account of this pending litigation that the date of the annual convention has been delayed from April, the usual meeting time, until September. Crawford said the association is now in a position to adopt and press forward the remainder of its program.

The association was organized April 17, 1922. Since that time meetings have been held in Austin, Galveston, San Antonio, Dallas and Waco.

FIND TRIBAL REMAINS OF PRE-FLINT EPOCH

LONDON, Sept. 6.—In one of the wildest parts of Dartmoor, near Okehampton, 800 feet above the sea level excavations have revealed traces of population of a prehistoric tribe. Ancient earthworks, barrows and tumuli exist in the vicinity, and there now has been dug up a large number of stone implements, which authorities state are of great antiquity. They include axeheads, spearheads, rubbing stones and hammer stones, and date back to a period before flint instruments were used. The specimens have been offered to the British Museum and the Plymouth and Exeter museums, and the owner of the property, Mr. Reddie Mallett, is continuing his researches, and states that should future discoveries prove of sufficient value he will build a small museum on the site for the exhibition of the finds.

Forgets His New Name After Court Changes It

MIDDLETOWN, Conn., Sept. 6.—William J. Coughlin, assistant clerk of the Superior Court, had a call from Andrew Borg, who had his name changed by the local courts, but could not remember his new name. Mr. Coughlin searched the records and found the name was Barry.

Mr. Borg, or Barry, laboriously wrote the name on the back of an envelope and remarked: "I have lost it, I remember now."

DALLAS, Texas, Sept. 6.—Walter Bennett, 7, has a circus job future ahead of him, judging from his "carrying capacity."

While playing in the street near his home here, he was accidentally run over by a horse and wagon. A careful examination by doctors failed to reveal any sign of injury.

PORT JERVIS, N. Y., Sept. 6.—Big business interests of New England have blackjacked workers into avoiding the LaFollette movement, Senator Burton K. Wheeler, independent vice presidential candidate in an address to shopmen in the public square here this afternoon.

"It is all a part of the conspiracy of the republicans through big business interests to control the votes of workers by force."

THE FIRST NATIONAL BANK

WELCOMES OUR NEWEST INDUSTRY

This is another in a series of advertisements by employees of the First National Bank. Others will follow. Watch for them.

BY W. J. BYRNE

Do you realize that the population of Port Arthur is growing faster than its industries? This fact should cause our citizens to stop and think. It is a condition that must, sooner or later, be remedied or Port Arthur will continue throughout its life to be a one-industry town.

The hope of any community is in varied and multiple industries. Regardless of whether they are large or small, the city's strength and stability is in direct ratio to the number of industries.

Go down the line of progressive southern cities and you will find their growth made possible by the number and variety of its industries. Houston has grown and prospered because of this fact. So also has Birmingham, Ala. Waco, in the heart of the cotton belt, realized that cotton alone could not guarantee its future prosperity. Small industries would stabilize business in off-years and citizens started out to get them. Today Waco is on a solid business foundation with very few periods of depression to worry them.

That's why the First National Bank and every other business establishment in Port Arthur welcomes the West Manufacturing Co. It is the beginning, we believe of others to follow.

Port Arthur offers unlimited possibilities to small industries. They are the hope of our future progress and stability. Large industries are welcome of course. We want them. They all help. But in numbers there is strength and the smaller industry is therefore the thing worth fighting for.

Early Day Yellow Fever Epidemic Played Part in Destinies of Sabine and Galveston

DREAD SPECTRE PLAYED PRANK

Sabine By It Gained Prestige as Gulf's Biggest Port

Yellow fever, which used to wipe out whole settlements and remain in undisputed control of great stretches of country for years at a time, often does a positive service, the history of the Sabine district shows.

How this jaundiced spectre, which before medical science had reached its present stage, stretched forth its bony index finger and by a touch made fever wracked skeletons of healthful bodies, is remembered by old timers.

Few of these early settlers who saw the misery in the wake of a yellow fever epidemic can be convinced any good could come in any form from such a curse.

Written in Blood
Strange as it may seem, the history of two Texas cities was written with the blood of hundreds of victims of the great yellow fever epidemic which raged in Texas, Louisiana, Alabama and Mississippi in the early 30's.

The two cities which indirectly had their future destinies settled to an extent, by the yellow plague are Sabine and Galveston.

It is a well known fact to those acquainted with the early history of this section that Sabine Pass was for years the leading city of Jefferson county and the largest and most patronized port on the Gulf coast.

In the early 30's Sabine Pass is accredited with having from four to five thousand people, while the country seat, Beaumont, was but about half as large. Sabine Pass got a huge steamship trade from cotton shipped across Louisiana, Alabama and Mississippi. Beaumont had lumber mills, and this was its chief bid to population. Incidentally, Port Arthur, at the time of the history referred to, was not even a dream.

With the building of Sabine by the Kootz brothers in the middle 30's much of the trade from Sabine Pass was taken, but the two cities were understood to be about as one, being only three miles apart.

Galveston Let Offer Slide
The Southern Pacific, in building its road to the coast, first made overtures to Galveston. That city, it seems, was at that time making no special effort to encourage any kind of industries. The rail officials went to that city and were not, history records, offered even sites of land for the erection of terminal tracks.

The rail line could not wait. It must have a terminal and place from which the cargoes to and from the Southern Pacific line ships could be loaded. To temporarily offset the delay at Galveston the S. P. heads are said to have come to Sabine. Here, it is said, the rail men were given a courteous reception and were offered all the lands they desired free for terminals and tracks as well as sites for wharves.

The rail officials on a small scale began to route their ships and a good part of their freight via train to Sabine Pass. A nucleus of a terminal was begun and it looked like the project was going over permanently.

It was at this time destiny again offered Sabine one of its several big opportunities to become one of the largest ports in America and easily the leading one of Texas.

The medium used was a peculiar one this time—a yellow fever epidemic.

The epidemic was negative and merely incidental, but had its effect though the fever itself was miles away.

Just about the time the Southern Pacific had gotten its terminal system well underway at Sabine, the fever broke out in all its fury. The port of New Orleans was quarantined, as was practically the whole state of Louisiana.

The quarantining of the New Orleans port meant the business of the Southern Pacific lines on the Gulf coast had to be centered at Sabine. The city grew overnight as a port. The Southern Pacific built additions to its holdings. It is estimated there was at one time five miles of tracks at the Sabine S. P. terminals.

Steamships were centered at the wharves and had to swing clear of New Orleans. The Southern Pacific followed its only course and used Sabine exclusively for about two years.

The Good Old Days
Trade which had hitherto gone to New Orleans centered at the Texas city. At times from 25 to 30 ships were to be seen at the Sabine docks. Hotel business was flourishing and at that period the Jefferson county city was not only the leading port in Texas without odds, but probably led all others on the Gulf coast. Mobile not excepted.

The height of the city's prosperity was in 1895. After the epidemic passed and New Orleans again was open as a port, Sabine had built up its prestige as a port. Galveston was far behind and its business men are said to have many times rued the day they let the S. P. officials depart without giving them the dock and terminal space sought.

OUT OUR WAY

CLAIMS DEMOS 'HAD HYSTERIA'

Mrs. Bloodworth Refuses to Quit Party Post

FORT WORTH, Texas, Sept. 6.—Mrs. J. F. Bloodworth, democratic national committee woman from Texas, who was called upon by the recent state democratic convention to resign her post "as being out of harmony with the state and national party," reiterated her refusal to comply with the request in a letter to E. A. Berry, chairman of the state executive committee made public here today.

Mrs. Bloodworth charged that the decision of the convention was the result of "hysteria" and declared she was "duly elected in the state convention at Waco."

"I deny all charges made against me at the convention that I am in sympathy with 'riverbottom government,'" she declared.

"It must be apparent that the convention was in an excited frame of mind and I am constrained to believe that its action was out of harmony with the spirit of fair play," Mrs. Bloodworth said in pointing out that the meeting adopted the resolution against the wishes of former Governor James E. Ferguson.

The committeewoman said that she would abide by the wishes of the majority and support the democratic candidate for governor. "I was unable to vote for Mrs. Ferguson at either of the democratic primaries, but I am in favor of the majority rule and will support Mrs. Ferguson's candidacy," she declared.

EDUCATION SURVEY REPORT SEPTEMBER 10

AUSTIN, Sept. 6.—The final report of the Texas education survey which was conducted by Dr. George A. Works, of Cornell University, will have been completed by next week, and Governor Neff, who is chairman of the survey commission, has called the commission to meet in his office September 10 at 9 a. m. Dr. Works will submit his report to the commission at the coming meeting.

ENRAGED MONKEY BITES FRISCO WOMAN

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Sept. 6.—Attacked by an enraged monkey that escaped from a show here Mrs. Fernando Nelson was badly scratched and bitten before a policeman hearing her shrieks could rescue her.

The monkey climbed through the bedroom window, onto the bed and was about to seize the woman by the throat when she awoke and screamed. The animal leaped upon her and in the ensuing struggle the bedroom was completely wrecked.

Galveston changed its attitude. The Southern Pacific was finally persuaded to move its terminal there. Why the terminal did not stay at Sabine and make it the Galveston of Texas is another prank of circumstance not completely explained.

Yellow fever gave Sabine the greatest prestige it has ever known, and awoke Galveston to the fact it must eliminate the Jefferson county port if it was to be a leading port of Texas.

BUTTE'S NOMINATION IS FILED FOR GOVERNOR

AUSTIN, Sept. 6.—Dr. Geo. C. Butte formally became the republican candidate for governor today when his nomination by the republican executive committee was filed with the secretary of state by George Sprenberg, Austin postmaster, who attended the Dallas meeting of the committee.

Dr. Butte is enroute to this country from Europe, and is due to reach New York September 11.

Mrs. Butte, who is a democrat, thinks Dr. Butte should accept the nomination.

GOV. NEFF TO VISIT PEN AT HUNTSVILLE

AUSTIN, Sept. 6.—Governor Neff will leave Sunday night for Huntsville where the state prison is located and the state prison commissioners make their headquarters. Further than to say he was going on a business trip, the governor declined to discuss the purposes of his visit.

VETERAN TEXARKANA EDITOR SUCCEUMBS

TEXARKANA, Texas, Sept. 6.—James A. Stuart, 83, veteran Texarkana editor died here today. Stuart was formerly editor of the Texarkana Courier, later known as the Four State Press.

Senility was the cause of death.

REVUE TICKETS ON SALE TODAY

Legion Production To Go On Boards Monday Night

Final rehearsals over, scenery, costumes and properties assembled, the huge cast of the American Legion show, "The Dixie Revue of 1924," awaits the first curtain call for the production Monday night.

Ticket sales for the show opened for the revue several days ago, and Sunday afternoon from 2 until 5 o'clock the box office at the Elks theater will be open to sell admission tickets and make reservations for the three nights the show will be given, Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday nights.

Like the Legion's offering to Port Arthur theater goes last year, the show this year is a Chris Ming production, and George L. Stevens has taken personal charge of the cast and rehearsals. Many of the favorite players in Port Arthur's home talent shows and a number of new players have been cast in the "Dixie Revue of 1924."

Of the 14 scenes in the two acts of the Legion's revue, eight make up the first part. An extravaganza, with choruses, soloists and humorists, closing with a minstrel scene, comprises the first act. Songs of periods from the old colonial days, through the height of the jazz era are presented in the first act, soloists, dancers and choruses of boys and girls interpreting the various kinds of songs.

A wide range of diversions are listed for the second act. Girls from the north, south, east and west, with their retinues of attendants in costumes designed in New York, pass in review with music and dancing. Chocked full of flashy wit is the skit arranged for scene 5 of the second act, starring Miss Thelma Barnes and James L. Dunn, who carried off the comic characters in the Legion show last year.

FALL BEGINS

A new season gives us a new interest in our social and business affairs—new spirit and energy and hope with which to take a firmer grasp on things. To grab ourselves in the correct dress of the season is the surest way of keeping in step—and in "pep."

A GOOD appetite means a cheerful disposition. You may have a good appetite if the blood that goes constantly to your vital organs is pure. S.S.S. purifies the blood—a good appetite follows and you will have a clear complexion and will be strong, cheerful and healthy.

Don't go on feeling up one day and down the next—hardly sick but never well—losing "pep," punch and ambition. Hearty eaters are the red-blooded men and women. Enjoy your food! Get back your strength and energy! Reclaim yourself before it is too late! People in a physically run-down condition are an easy prey to disease.

S.S.S. is what is needed. Your blood needs purifying. Your blood-cells supply the energy which keeps your body well and fit. S.S.S. aids Nature in supplying new red-blood-cells—the spark that renews your system. Carefully selected, scientifically proportioned, and prepared herbs and barks make up S.S.S.—the great blood purifier which gives Nature a helping hand.

Get back the lost appetite, the missing vitality, the keen, sparkling eyes, that look of determination. S.S.S. will give you more energy, vitality and vigor and a more up and going appearance.

S.S.S. is sold at all good drug stores in two sizes. The larger size is more economical.

Many of Younger Set In Revue Which Will Usher In Autumn Social Season

THE fall social season will be ushered in Monday when the youngest and most beautiful members of the local younger set, the future leaders of Port Arthur's society, don the Thespian robes and lend their talent and personality to the presentation of the American Legion's Dixie Revue of 1924 at the Elks theater on September 8, 9 and 10.

On those three nights Port Arthur society will fill the boxes and overflow into the reserved seats of the theater as they applaud the efforts of their own fairest sub-bels who with sparkling eyes and twinkling toes will prove that a home talent production can take its place with the more ambitious ventures of Flo. Ziegfeld and other New York promoters of the art of musical comedy.

The initial event of the season will fittingly introduce an exposition of the dramatic art which was elevated to the highest social ranks by Mrs. Julia Lydie Hoyt of New York and Lady Diana Manners, favorite daughter of the Court of St. James.

The revue, which is being staged under the direction of the Chris Ming Production company of Houston, will be distinguished from similar affairs by its gorgeous settings, elaborate costumes, pulchritudinous choruses and the talent and well known reputations of its principals.

With the cooler weather last week came several delightful entertainments, and although the social calendar was not filled to overflowing with many of these pleasing hospitalities they proved a most welcome diversion from the otherwise dull week.

Dances were the most popular form of amusement for the week, the social calendar being featured by three of these pleasing events. On Tuesday evening the Virginians played for a delightful dance at the Department Club, and on Wednesday evening the A. & M. Ex-Students association of Port Arthur held a brilliant dance at the Pleasure Pier, while on Friday evening the Joy Makers played for an equally delightful dance at the Department Club.

All of these entertainments afforded much gaiety for the week, each being a popular affair, including in its personnel of guests the social elite of the younger set. Soon even these ranks will be depleted, as the time is rapidly approaching for the return to schools and colleges and those of the young folk, now out of town, as well as those who have remained in Port Arthur for the summer, are planning a hectic few weeks before returning to school activities.

THEATRICALS will perhaps form the chief diversion for the younger set during the coming week, at least for the first few days, and it is expected that numerous entertainments will follow during the latter part of the week.

Farewell parties for students leaving for colleges and universities will soon be the order of the day, and it is probable that the next few weeks will witness a multitude of these pleasing affairs.

Playlet Given By Missionary Society Friday

Mrs. J. A. House, Mrs. Dewey Boswell and Mrs. Guy Johnson graciously entertained the members of the Missionary Society of the First Christian church Friday afternoon at the regular monthly session at the church, 230 o'clock.

A delightful and interesting program was rendered during the afternoon hours, preceded by a business session when plans were made for a series of meetings on stewardship, to be held this month.

Plans were also discussed for celebrating the Golden Jubilee of the Missionary Society, this celebration being held on October 22, with Mrs. John Stanley, Mrs. J. B. Talley, and Mrs. W. Steel as hostesses, assisted by three others to be appointed later.

Mrs. C. E. Perry was appointed chairman of the program for this occasion which will be on "Achievements of the Golden Jubilee."

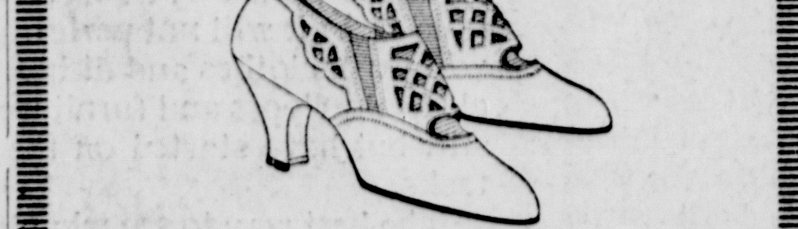

Yesterday's program took the form of a delightful playlet and was sponsored by Mrs. W. E. Clinton. The scene was laid at the clinic of a missionary specialist, where seven patients came to have their cases diagnosed.

Mrs. Clinton made an admirable doctor and, her special treatment of each case was a specialty. Assisting at the clinic was Nurse Tryett, whose role was taken by Mrs. C. K. DeBusk.

Among some of the patients arriving for treatment were Mrs. L. J. Hankins, who had the writer's complaint; Mrs. J. A. Burton, who had chills and fever; Mrs. J. H. Stanley, who was troubled with automobility; Mrs. Burt Loy, who was affected with housemaid's knee; Mrs. J. B. Talley, who was nearsighted; Mrs. Atkinson, who had rheumatism and hardening of the arteries; and Mrs. Lee Summers who had general debility. All the characters were unusually good and were admirably cast in their different roles.

Following the playlet, Mrs. S. E. Boney conducted the devotional service and Mrs. Carl T. Long sang the Jubilee song, following which Rev. R. R. Yelderman gave a few Golden Jubilee notes. The program was concluded with an amusing reading by little Miss Madge Summers on "Discontented Soul."

Fifty-two members were in attendance at Friday's session.

Mrs. H. S. Westfall, a new addition to Port Arthur's musical circles, before her marriage was with the Aborn Opera company and has been heard in most of the leading theatres of the country. While her husband was stationed at the naval training camp at Mare Island, Calif., Mrs. Westfall lent a woman's hand to the task of making a home of the reservation where duty and hard work obtained precedence and for her untiring efforts in assisting the commanding officer to make that station more attractive and home-like to the young recruits who had recently entered the naval service, she was heartily commended by Joseph Daniels, head of the U. S. Navy Department, and Henry Grady Gattlin, chaplain of the U. S. naval training station, prior to the latter's departure for sea service.

Mrs. Westfall is a musician of rare ability, and musical circles of Port Arthur will especially welcome her advent into their ranks. She is a pupil of Oscar Saenger and has studied under other famous teachers.

Her appearance in "The Dixie Revue for 1924" will be her first public appearance in Port Arthur and keen interest centers around her number on the program.

Miss Janice Owens, Pretty Bride-Elect, Complimented With Attractive Shower

A CHARMINGLY appointed hospitality of Thursday having as hostesses Mrs. J. C. Bendixen and Mrs. W. J. Stafford at their home, 1216 Sixth street, was the lovely shower arranged in compliment to Miss Janice Owen, whose marriage to Mr. Frank W. Cooper of Casper, Wyoming, will be an event of September 11 at Denver, Colorado.

A delicate pink and white motif selected by the hostesses to feature the charming affair was displayed in the beautiful pink and white roses clustered amid ferns in tall vases and baskets and placed at vantage points about the rooms. A miniature bride, daintily attired in bridal costume, held the center of the table in the reception hall and over the table was suspended a shower of lovely rosebuds.

In the living room a dainty little bride and groom and a minister formed the decorations of the living room table. Baskets of flowers were placed at each end of the table and elsewhere about the room.

The dining room, however, proved to be the most attractively decorated room of those given over to the hospitality. The table, with dainty pink cover, was centered with a beautiful two-tiered wedding cake, topped with a miniature bride and groom, around which were banded wreaths of lovely fern. Just above the lovely cake was a pretty wedding bell of pink suspended from the chandelier, and hanging from the center of the bell were a multitude of streamers, with clusters of the pretty pink and white blossoms attached to the end of each. Crystal baskets filled with the favored blossoms gave floral beauty to the room and gave an added charm to the table appointments.

During the evening each guest was given an envelope in which was a piece of material and they were bidden to make something for the bride's trousseau. The prize for the cleverest garment was awarded to pretty bride-elect, who received an adorable lavender embroidered gift towel.

At the close of this enjoyable contest Miss Owen was presented with a note on which was written "Every thing worth having is worth looking for." After looking in several places and finding similar notes she finally found a large box, attractively decorated in pink and white, addressed to her and filled with many beautiful and useful gifts. A dainty ice course was served after the gifts had been displayed and admired by the bride-elect and the guests.

Enjoying the gracious hospitality were Miss Janice Owen, Miss Agnes Watkins, Mrs. J. C. Hamilton, Mrs. Robert C. Saffley, Miss Ethel Holmes, Miss Valerie Pruitt, Miss Nora Bringle, Mrs. W. H. Brown, Mrs. L. A. Glickler, Mrs. H. C. Crawford, Mrs. C. E. Booz Jr., Mrs. Grady Odum, Mrs. A. J. Jones, Miss Leonora Latimer, Miss Winifred Brown, Mrs. B. S. Granger, Miss Ann Welch, Miss Ola Owen, Mrs. W. J. Stafford and Mrs. J. C. Bendixen.

After the swim a picnic supper will be enjoyed on the beach, and all members who attend are requested to furnish a basket lunch for the occasion.

At the last session of the Royal Neighbors a social hour was enjoyed after the regular business session and Miss Abbie Rose Cox entertained the members with a baritone solo with piano accompaniment by Mrs. W. G. Montgomery.

Lemon Juice Whitens Skin

The only harmless way to bleach the skin white is to mix the juice of two lemons with three ounces of Orchard White, which any druggist will supply for a few cents. Shake well in a bottle, and you have a whole quarter-pint of the most wonderful skin whitener, softener and beautifier.

Massage this sweetly fragrant lemon bleach into the face, neck, arms and hands. It can not irritate. Famous stage beauties use it to bring that clear, youthful skin and rosy-white complexion; also as a freckle, sunburn and tan bleach. You must mix this remarkable lotion yourself. It can not be bought ready to use because it acts best immediately after it is prepared.—Advt.

A FREE PEOPLE

Earliest history tells us of man's constant struggle to avoid slavery.

Civilization has advanced, man has progressed, conditions have improved, until in this country all men are free.

Years ago slavery passed out of existence as an authorized institution, but only recently has emancipation been possible. Legally, and so far as the country is concerned, there is no slavery. Actually, and so far as the home is concerned, slavery still exists.

Someone has to do the household tasks. That someone is the wife. If unable to afford servants, she used to have no choice but to do them herself. She need no longer be a slave in any home. Electricity, the cheapest and most valuable servant in the world, has made her actual freedom possible where the law could not.

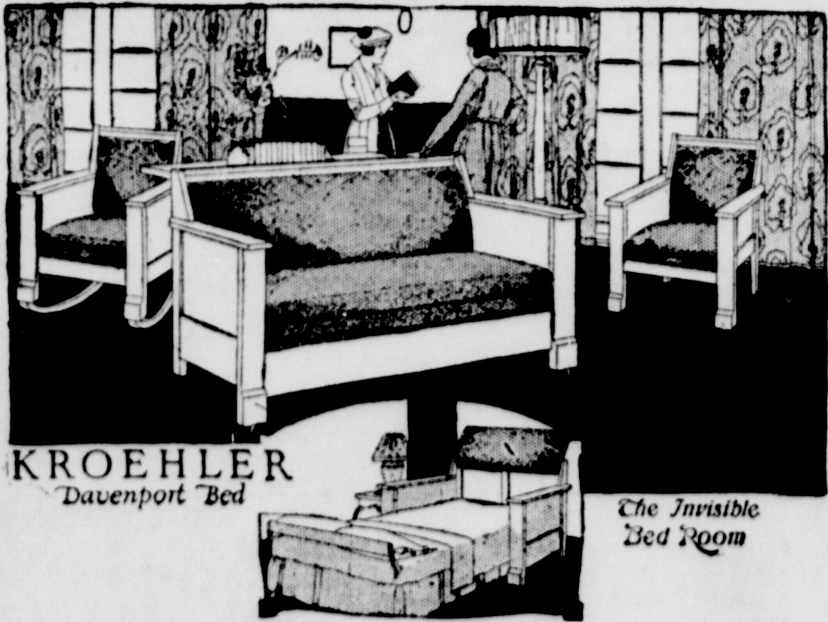

There is scarcely a single one of the multitude of household tasks it will not perform at a ridiculously low cost. It will wash clothes and dishes, iron, cook any sort of meal, clean the floors and furniture, purify the atmosphere, and still but have started on the long list of its performable tasks.

The best way to see what it can and will do for so small a cost is to visit the MODEL HOME. There you can see for yourself how useless slavery of any sort is.

Day Nursery Children Entertained

The third birthday anniversary of little Reginald Owens was the occasion of a happy celebration at the Day Nursery Thursday afternoon.

Reginald's mother, Mrs. R. Owens, prepared a lovely white birthday cake for the occasion, and the cake with the three red candles gleaming brightly on it formed the center of attraction for the little folks as they filed into the dining room for refreshments after an enjoyable afternoon of games and Victrola selections.

At the time appointed for the serving of the refreshments the children marched into the dining room to a march played on the Victrola, and Master Reginald, standing at one end of the table, sliced his birthday cake and presented each child with a piece. Refreshments of food, lemonade and cake were served.

How Do You Determine Real Mattress Comfort?

Conformity to the Contour of the Body

The manner in which the Sealy conforms to the contour of the body, removes that sense of pressure against the hips and shoulders so often experienced upon the ordinary mattress.

The Sealy not only "gives" without undue resistance at these points but also possesses the facility to rise and "fill in" the arches of the back, thus relieving tension.

These two distinct accomplishments free the body of those conditions detrimental to sleep and immeasurably aid sleep's vital functions.

Only the finest of cotton goes into the manufacture of every Sealy Mattress. This raw material must pass strict and rigid inspection before it is accepted by the factory. The Sealy label is your guarantee of perfection in every sense. According to government statistics the cotton crop is far below normal and the class of raw material going into every Sealy Mattress is naturally scarce. This will naturally cause a decided advance in this product and will necessitate a further advance in the near future on Sealy Mattresses. LITTLE THEATRE MOVEMENTS

By W. E. HILL.
Copyright 1924 by The Chicago Tribune.

This is one of those gripping little one-act dramas about life in the Tennessee mountains. "Oh, Mammy, I'm afeared—I kin hear the bloodhounds!" says Sal, the daughter. Will you look at the trembling stranger! Already he feels the noose about his neck.

The playlet done entirely in French. Pierrot and Columbine, have promised Pantaloon a nice new five dollar bill if he will pick up a pin from the floor. Pantaloon raises it to five dollars and fifty cents. After much haggling Pierrot agrees, and Pantaloon stoops over to pick up the pin. There upon, Pierrot gives him a kick, and exits, with Columbine shouting gleefully. Pantaloon says "Je ne le comprend pas" and the curtains are drawn. Done in French, the audience supposes the playlet to be frightfully risqué and enjoys it hugely. Those who get a stray adjective or a preposition now and then enjoy it even more.

The visiting member of a rival little theatre group. A bit too commercial is his verdict.

No little theatre movement can move successfully without patronesses. Here are three of them. Only the socially right ones are asked. Sometimes a wrong one creeps in, but only if she has oodles of money.

Little theatre players doing "The Jewel Merchants" in a setting that is more or less suggestive of the northern border of Tuscany. While it does not in any way resemble the northern border of Tuscany, it gives one the feeling of northern Tuscany. This is a very tense moment in the drama. Graciosa, played feelingly by Mrs. Maud Crosby Bust, is hoping that heaven will protect the working girl.

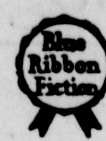

Talented member of a little theatre group as Saint Anthony of Padua—something to write home to Mr. Maeterlinck about.

A gipsy? You've guessed it. They're going to sing about the raggle taggle gipsies.

No. 3
A group of active members in the little theatre movement. From left to right, we have the art directors, the handsome leading man, the leading lady, the director, and the ingenue. The director's great slogan is: "Fine! We'll do it with lights and a little theatrical gauze." The leading lady's favorite part last season was "Jane Cleg." Her dresses were beautiful in it. The ingenue is partial to "Miss Roberts," in "The Mollusc."

TOADS and DIAMONDS

By Elisabeth Sanxay Holding

Upon Some Mortals the Fairies Bestow the Gift of Sympathy and Tact and Kindness, And Upon Others Merely That of Plain Speaking

THIS is a story of two sisters. The younger, a gentle and lovely creature, was approached at the well-side by a poor old woman, who asked for a drink of water, and the girl replied so civilly and kindly that the old woman—who was really a fairy in disguise—bestowed upon her the remarkable gift of having pearls and diamonds fall from her lips whenever she spoke. The elder sister, not unnaturally, wanted the same thing to happen to herself, and hurried off to the well, but this time the fairy had assumed an altogether different disguise, so that the girl did not know her, and, being by nature an arrogant, ill-mannered, hard-hearted person, she behaved so badly that for a punishment she had to utter toads. And there are to this day people whose words are precious and beautiful, and a good many others whose words, in whatever cause, inspire nothing but displeasure.

Among these latter must be counted Miss Dora Fergus. It was no offense fairy who had done this to her, but she had nevertheless brought it upon herself by never examining her words before she spoke them, and by never caring what harm they might do. She didn't exactly want to hurt; simply she didn't mind much whether she did or not. She wasn't hideous and altogether wicked, as bad sisters are in fairy tales; on the contrary, she was a rather handsome young woman of twenty-five, with many excellent qualities. She had studied nursing, with a sincere and admirable desire to be useful, and she had done her conscientious best for many a poor sufferer. There was no time when she wasn't ready to give up her rest and comfort and all her personal interests to care for some sick person, and she did it splendidly. The matron of the hospital where she had trained spoke of Miss Fergus with enthusiasm—but no one else did, not even people whose lives she had helped to save. They were painfully grateful, from a sense of duty, and that was all.

Miss Fergus knew she wasn't liked, and though she spoke of it with pride, as if it marked superior qualities in her, sometimes she was upset about it, and thought she would give up private nursing for hospital work again. She could not quite make up her mind to do that, however, because it would mean acknowledging herself a failure, a thing profoundly distasteful to her pride. So she went on, becoming more and more plain-spoken every day, and actually proud of it.

It may have been bad for her that she could say whatever she pleased at home without causing the least resentment. She lived in a tiny little flat with her sister Winifred, and this sister went about in a sort of armor of good-temper and charity and tolerance that made her safe from the plainest speaking there could be. She was a nice looking girl, but not so handsome as Dora, and nothing like so neat and trim. Sometimes you might even think she didn't care very much how she looked, and, strangely enough, other people didn't seem to care either, but were delighted to see her, even if her hair wasn't neat or her shoes shined. She was such a jolly, amusing, light-hearted girl that it was surprising to find out that she was also a remarkably efficient domestic economist, and wrote articles and gave lectures, besides running their own household in masterly fashion. Now, when Dora worked, she worked frightfully hard, and you could see how hard it was; but Winifred did everything without apparent effort, and that is sometimes irritating to the other sort of people. Dora accused her sister of not taking life seriously enough.

"I believe life enjoys that," said Winifred. "I know I should."

"You'll be sorry later on," said Dora.

"That's the best time to be sorry," said Winifred. "I hope it'll be much later on."

It would be entirely unjust to say that Dora wanted any disaster to overtake her sister; she loved Winifred deeply and loyally, and would have sacrificed anything in the world for her. But she did wish that the careless, cheerful creature could be taught—she wasn't clear what she should be taught—perhaps that everything was difficult and unpleasant.

"Work isn't worth doing that you can't put your whole heart into," she declared.

"I can't help it," Winifred answered.

"Large pieces of my heart have to stay outside my work, for you and for my friends."

"While I'm working I think of nothing but my work," said Dora.

She said that one evening when she was at home resting after an exhausting case, and it was true when she said it. But less than a week later it ceased to be true.

At first she didn't realize what had happened. She had never been on a case with Doctor Llewellyn before, though she had seen him often in the hospital, and she believed that what she felt was a great admiration for his skill and remarkable ability. The patient was a trying one, a big, heavy, gloomy man of fifty or so, with a bad attack of influenza, and it was his disposition to object to everything. For the first day or so he was too ill to do much more than look frightfully disgusted and weary, but as he grew a little better he became fercious. He greeted Doctor Llewellyn with scorn and told him what he ought to have done.

"To be perfectly frank," he said—which was one of Dora's own favorite beginnings—"I haven't much use for doctors."

"That makes me think of Tommy Atkins," said Doctor Llewellyn, with perfect good humor. "A hero in war time, but no use in peace, eh?"

When Dora followed him out into the hall for that mysterious conference so embarrassing to patients she didn't refrain from an unprofessional remark.

"Mr. Wynn's not easy to look after," she said.

Doctor Llewellyn looked at her with a rather enigmatic smile.

"Consider him a test case," he said.

Dora didn't understand this, and, not being fond of problems, decided to forget it. But she was peculiarly anxious to make a success of this case, because she admired Doctor Llewellyn so much. Admired him professionally, and also as a human being, because of his patience and kindness and good temper. And it was not that sort of good temper which Dora often found irritating; it cost him no effort, it wasn't a conscious virtue; he simply was like that. A lean, dark little Welshman, not at all handsome, but with a queer, shrewd, cheerful smile no one could resist.

She kept on admiring and admiring until she became surprised and alarmed at the amount of time she spent in admiration. Not only did she want to please Doctor Llewellyn, but with a patient by performing her duties to perfection, but she wanted to please him by the way she put on her cap. But, unfortunately, it never occurred to her to try pleasing Mr. Wynn. He was nothing but a patient, to be made well in spite of himself, so that he would do credit to his doctor.

No denying that he was troublesome! He wouldn't have a hot water bottle. When Dora put it at his feet he kicked it out on the floor.

"Take it away!" he shouted. "I'm not an old woman. If I'm cold, why in the name of common sense don't you keep that window closed?"

Now, Dora had endured as much as she was inclined to endure from his capriciousness. "Doctor Llewellyn gave orders for the window to be open all the time," she said tartly.

"It's my room and my window!" cried he with violence. "And I'll give the orders."

"I'm here to carry out Doctor Llewellyn's orders," she retorted.

"Then don't be here," he answered, promptly. "You—you—eat up in bed, ready to cry with weakness and fury—you—expel me out—you—!" and, to his astonishment and shame, he did begin to cry, something he hadn't done since he was six years old. He didn't know it was influenza that made him; he thought it was Dora. And Dora knew it was bad for him to cry, and instead of pretending not to notice it, and distracting his mind, she said, severely:

"Come, Mr. Wynn! Be a man!"

The effect of this speech frightened her. Ten minutes later she was obliged to do the most humiliating thing that could have fallen to her: she had to go downstairs and telephone to Doctor Llewellyn and tell him that Mr. Wynn insisted upon another nurse at once.

The doctor arrived promptly. He found Miss Fergus sitting on the stairs outside her patient's door, looking so pale and so desperate that any one would have pitied her.

"He got up and locked the door," she said, as steadily as she could. "He seems to have taken a dislike to me."

"When we're sick we're all apt to be unreasonable," he said, gently. And, somehow, while his words seemed to free her from blame, they seemed also to exasperate Mr. Wynn.

"I simply tried to carry out my orders," she said.

She fancied he was going to speak, but he did not. He was looking at nothing at all, with an expression she could not read. And it was perhaps the first time in her life she had wanted to read an expression.

"Well," he said, suddenly, "I'll see."

He was shut up with Mr. Wynn for a long time. Dora was still on the stairs when he came out, closing the door behind him.

"I'm sorry," he said. "Very sorry, indeed, but I'm afraid this can't be patched up."

The color rose in her cheeks.

"Then I'm to go?" she asked. "Very well."

"I'm sorry," he said again.

"It's only what I have to expect," said she, with a grim smile. "That's the usual reward for doing the best you can. As far as I can see, a nurse who won't flatter her patients and humor them like babies—"

"Miss Fergus," he interrupted, "did you ever see a doctor or a nurse make a patient get well?"

She was surprised, and at a loss what to answer.

"I—," she began, but he answered for her.

"You never did," he said. "You have to make a patient make himself get well. And it's an art. Instead of calling it flattery and humoring, you might call it suggesting."

"I'm afraid I'm not very good at that," she said. "It's always been my firm belief that plain speaking is always best."

"And what's the special merit of it?" he asked, quietly. "Did you ever think, Miss Fergus, that it's not complimentary to call a woman plain looking? Well, plain-spoken isn't much better."

And it was much for Winifred's credit that she was able to feel sorry for any one at that time, because she had cause to feel very much otherwise. But, then, she was a rather remarkable girl; she even imagined it was a little selfish to show her happiness in Dora's presence, like a woman displaying marvelous jewelry to a pauper.

And she was glad she had said nothing, for, after supper was over, Dora did an unusual thing—she offered to dry the dishes.

"No!" said Winifred. "You're tired, Dora, and I'm not. Rest while you have the chance."

But Dora followed her into the kitchen and stood in the doorway, so tall and straight and handsome in her severe dark dress, looking so competent and self-assured a young woman as ever lived, but feeling far from that.

"Let me help you, Win," she said, in a queer voice. "I think it's likely I'll have more time now to rest than I want."

She began to polish a glass, doing it well, but taking twice as long as her sister would have done. What she wanted to do was to throw her arms about dear, kind, casual old Winifred, and cry, but she had never learned how to do such things, and could only talk. She told her about Mr. Wynn, told it truthfully and justly, too.

"Of course, Doctor Llewellyn will never call me on another case," she said; she began in an indifferent, offhand fashion, but she ended on a touchingly forlorn note.

Winifred was not plain-spoken; instead of saying, "Well, you brought it on yourself," or something of that sort, she said: "There's such a good film at the Palace; let's go and see it. We haven't been out together for ever so long."

And she never mentioned that a visitor was coming that evening, a visitor whom she had longed all day to see, and who would now come and find nobody at home. She was even extravagant with happiness, to throw away an evening of it.

But just as they were about to leave the house the door bell rang.

"I think," said Winifred, whose face couldn't be seen, "I think it's Mr. Madison. Because he said he might come."

"Who's Mr. Madison?" asked Dora, and Winifred made the stupid and unsatisfactory reply that he was "very nice."

It was not this nice Mr. Madison, however, but Doctor Llewellyn, and one sister was as much surprised as the other to see him.

"Oh! Just going out?" he said. "Then I'll—"

"No," said Winifred, hastily. "We weren't really going out. We were only—"

She usually stopped short in a sentence that was becoming involved, and continued: "Do come in, Doctor Llewellyn."

He did so, and with his hat and overcoat he seemed to shed all traces of his usual self and to become an altogether different person—a thing doctors often do when paying an unprofessional visit. Winifred didn't notice this, because she had never observed him being professional, but Dora had.

"Why did he come?" she thought. "Why is he being so friendly and kind? Because he's sorry for me?"

The idea did not please her; she felt it was necessary to show him she hadn't been at all hurt by that Wynn affair; that, on the contrary, she was perfectly happy and contented. And, considering that she had never before attempted to act that part, she succeeded marvelously well. If she were surprised at the unexpected youthfulness and gallantry and high spirits of Doctor Llewellyn, he was still more surprised by the sight of the plain-spoken Miss Fergus being nothing in the world but a pretty girl in her own home. He decided that a nurse's uniform was unbecoming, that nurses looked much better in dark blue, with their splendid hair not hidden by even the smallest of caps, and their cheeks a little flushed and their faces not anxious or preoccupied, but smiling.

To tell the truth, he had felt sorry for her, and he felt sorrier than ever now that he saw what she could be when she chose. He had always felt an odd sort of liking for Miss Fergus, even long ago, in the hospital; he had seen something noble and admirable in her fidelity to duty, her complete forgetfulness of any selfish interest. She could always be trusted; she never failed, never forgot, and what was more, she was intelligent and quick-witted, and understood. For some time, when he was sending patients to that hospital, he would recommend Miss Fergus to them. But it didn't work; not all his recommendations, not all the matrons' praises, could persuade patients to swallow Miss Fergus' plain-speaking. To any one who was gravely ill she was an angel, but once turn the corner into convalescence, and you were certain to get a piece of her mind, a nasty, hard piece, and not a fair sample of the whole. So he had given up recommending her.

But, somehow, after she had left the hospital to take up private nursing, she had lingered in his mind as a singularly competent and trustworthy young woman. And, being human, he had also remembered how handsome and dignified she was, and how attentive to everything he said. So he had picked her out for Mr. Wynn, who had himself a reputation for saying what he thought and not minding matters, and so on.

Well, she had failed utterly, and not as a nurse, but as a woman. She had failed in sympathy and tact and kindness. And yet! And yet! Instead of giving her up as hopeless, Doctor Llewellyn had been thinking of her during all the spare minutes of his busy afternoon, not with annoyance, but with all his old liking and a new and great pity. He fancied she had looked bewildered and forlorn, as if she didn't understand, like a child who had hurt itself and did not know the reasons of its pain. He felt sure her unfortunate words were not out of malice or a hard heart, but to some queer, blind spot in her soul.

He wanted her to know how he felt about that. And he wanted her to have another chance.

"I'm trying to interest the township in the idea of a district nurse," he said. "The Lord knows we need one badly enough. We have families here—"

He was interrupted here by the arrival of some young chap called Madison. To the amazement of Winifred he did not seem dazzled or even much interested in this visitor, and neither did Dora. They seemed to think he was in no way different from other young men; they were not aware that he was unique, wonderful, unlike any other man who had breathed.

"We have families here," Doctor Llewellyn went on, after politely acknowledging the introduction, "who are literally perishing as a result of their appalling ignorance—" and so on, and so on. If Dora was listening to him with such great interest it was only courteous, wasn't it, for Winifred to give her attention to the other guest? So she did, and though neither she nor Mr. Madison had much to say, they appeared to find it satisfactory.

The two men went away together, with that sudden friendliness that so often attacks departing guests. When the door had closed behind them Winifred said, "Well!" with a smile. She meant, "You saw him. What have you to say?"

But Dora, with strangely bright eyes, said, "It's an honor!"

"What an honor?" inquired her sister.

"For me to be asked."

"But asked—I'm afraid I didn't hear that special part of what Doctor Llewellyn was saying, Dora."

Dora wasn't sorry to tell it again.

"He got three or four wealthy men interested in his idea, and as long as the township won't support a district nurse, these men are doing it at their own expense. It's all Doctor Llewellyn's idea, of course, and he's in charge of everything. And, Winifred, he wants me to be the nurse!"

III.

MISS FERGUS was too much disgusted to knock at the door. It was a sweltering day, and she was tired beyond measure; she had been trying since early morning to show people how to do things, how to bathe babies and how to dress them, how to make up formulas, how to cook, how to clean, how to ventilate—and what discouraging pupils! They didn't wish to learn; they wanted to watch her do things while they sat by in a silence she fancied was sometimes scornful. And here she was, back at the Dominicks' again, their hall still cluttered with the same disgraceful mess. She had talked to them so eloquently and sensibly and tactfully; she had urged them to set a good example to the other tenants in the house, she had assured them that they would have better health if they would cease throwing the remnants of their outlandish meals into the hall outside their front door. They had listened, the grandmother, the aunt, the mother, the father, and the four children, and they had seemed to be impressed. But evidently they hadn't been.

THE flat was dim and cool and fragrant with flowers; even in her agitation Miss Fergus perceived something extraordinary in the atmosphere. She closed the front door quietly behind her and looking into the sitting room saw Winifred there with Mr. Madison. Or, really, she saw nothing but Winifred's face, and she was so struck by its radiant and lovely look, that she stopped, abashed. She knew she stood in the presence of love.

"I can't," she thought. "I can't! It would be wicked to disturb her now—with my troubles. Dear little Win!"

It was her laudable intention to go on tiptoe down the hall to her own room and shut herself and her misery away from Winifred, but just as she passed the door a loud sob escaped her.

"Dora!" cried her sister.

Miss Fergus tried to hurry on, but tears blinded her, and she was easily captured.

"You poor, hot, tired thing!" said Winifred, with her arms about her. "What's gone wrong?"

"I've failed!" said Dora. She didn't care whether Mr. Madison heard her or not. "I've spoiled everything—everything! I wouldn't care so much—if it weren't for that poor, poor, greedy little baby. If I'd—oh, if I'd only—kept still—I could have washed that baby and made it comfortable—"

And now, it's all my fault—"

She had never broken down before in her life, and now that she had begun, she did it thoroughly.

"I shouldn't be a nurse!" she cried. "I couldn't even help that baby! Flannel—red flannel—even round its poor little head—and flies everywhere—and something—I think it was coffee—in its feeding bottle. I'll telephone to Doctor Llewellyn. I'll tell him I've failed utterly—that I've only antagonized those awful Dominicks. Perhaps if he goes, he can persuade them not to kill that poor, poor baby!"

"Just wait a minute!" said Winifred. "The inspection was to be this afternoon, wasn't it, Dora?"

"This time I'll have to threaten them with the Board of Health," she thought.

So far she had avoided threats, in a great effort not to antagonize; she had done her best to repress that habit of plain speaking, and the result had surprised her. People liked her better when they didn't know all she thought about them. And Doctor Llewellyn congratulated her every time he saw her.

This morning she had gone to his office for instructions, and he had told her that in the afternoon he was going to take the three men principally interested in the project on a sort of tour of inspection.

"I don't like to do it," he said. "It seems to me a rather brutal thing to bring these strangers into poor people's homes to look at the good they've done. But it can't be helped. They expect to see definite, tangible results. They don't understand what slow work it is to educate people to different habits, or how long it is before the seed bears fruit. If they don't actually see something, they'll very likely be discouraged. So, Miss Fergus, they've got to see something. Dress up all your babies and get your mothers to put up clean curtains, and so on. And make a special point of those Dominicks, will you?"

They're rather in the public eye, you know—they've lost three children already, and the grandfather was run over last year, and the oldest boy's in the reformatory. They've been in the newspapers. If the Dominicks can be improved, nothing is impossible."

Miss Fergus had achieved fairly good results with her other families but at a fearful cost to herself. She was exhausted, and she was apprehensive; she didn't trust the families to remain in the state in which she had put them. And that was why she had left the Dominicks until last, because she was absolutely certain they wouldn't maintain decorum.

The room was intolerably hot in the afternoon sun and blazing with flies. And in the midst of a disorder intolerable sat old Mrs. Dominick in a rocking chair, singing to an angry little baby, while the mother—of all superfluous things—was making fringe on a new red tablecloth!

The sight of their calm contentment in that frightful room was too much for Miss Fergus.

"Where are those screens?" she demanded. "Doctor Llewellyn paid for them out of his own pocket to protect your children from these flies!"

Old Mrs. Dominick pointed triumphantly to one window in which there was a screen, but it was filled with great jagged holes. She explained in broken English that "boys" had taken the others.

"What boys?" asked Miss Fergus, but the old woman shrugged her shoulders and said she didn't know.

Miss Fergus then turned her attention to the baby. She found it anointed with mutton fat and wrapped in flannel; its poor little face was crimson.

"Get me a basin of warm water, and take all that stuff off the child," she cried.

"That makes strong!" the grandmother protested. "Make very strong—the sheep fat."

And then, suddenly, the heat and the dirt and the smell of that room, and the crying of the wretched little baby and the calm content of the women quite overwhelmed the tired Miss Fergus.

"You'll kill that baby!" she cried. "Just as you killed the other poor little creatures, with your obstinate ignorance and stupidity, you—"

The mother and the grandmother objected to being told they had killed those babies, and they said so, forcibly. They said outrageous things, and in the end the mother actually pushed her out into the hall and held the door against her.

The room was intolerably hot in the afternoon sun and blazing with flies. And in the midst of a disorder intolerable sat old Mrs. Dominick in a rocking chair, singing to an angry little baby, while the mother—of all superfluous things—was making fringe on a new red tablecloth!

"Yes. But it doesn't matter now. They'll all see that it's done more harm than good. Very likely they'll be discouraged and give up the whole thing—give up Dr. Llewellyn's wonderful idea that he's set his heart on. It's all my fault!"

Mr. Madison and Winifred exchanged a glance.

"See here!" said he, gently. "You're tired and unstrung. Suppose you lie down and rest for a bit, and let Winifred try her hand with those people?"

"No; it's my job!" Miss Fergus began, but she stopped. After all, wasn't it the chief thing that the job should be done, the baby helped, Doctor Llewellyn's project saved? It didn't matter who did it. It didn't matter how much humiliated and belittled she was, only let the work be accomplished.

"Harry!" she said. "There's only a little time left!"

The front door closed after them, and there she was, left alone, the most complete and ignominious failure. All desire to cry had vanished; she had become very quiet now, and very clear in her thoughts. She went into the sitting room, left in such peace and exquisite order by Winifred, and she sat down to have it out once and for all with the plain-spoken Miss Fergus.

She realized now what her sister's forbearance had meant to her, all her life. She realized how many other people had refrained from cruel frankness toward her. Even Mr. Wynn, in spite of his bluster, hadn't said anything deliberately unkind. Suppose, when she had told him to "be a man," he had retorted by telling her to "be a woman?" Suppose Mr. Madison had spoken plainly to her just now? But he hadn't; he had only thought of helping. For years and years she had been seeing the world as a collection of incompetent and exasperating people who wouldn't do what was best for them; she felt now she had been surrounded by creatures of almost angelic kindness who had allowed her to trample on them and never risen against her.

Now, whatever faults Miss Fergus had, she was absolutely honest and courageous. She had no sooner come to the conclusion that she was wrong than she wanted to acknowledge her fault and, as far as possible, remedy it. She got up, and after washing her face in cold water and smoothing her hair, she set out for the Dominicks, prepared to apologize if it cost her her life.

"I'll tell them I didn't mean what I said," she thought. "Of course, the poor creatures wouldn't really have hurt the babies for anything in the world. Perhaps if I can make them see that I'm fond of the baby, and not just meddling—"

But when she reached the place, she saw a motor car outside, and she knew that she had come too late. Dr. Llewellyn and his party had arrived. At first she thought she would turn back, but turning back had never been her way, and she went on, up the dark stairs.

It was a great relief to find that the hall outside the flat had a violent and hasty cleaning. It was by no means what it should have been, but it wasn't so flagrantly disgraceful. She heard voices inside as she knocked at the door; no one heard her, so she walked in.

Young Mr. Madison was holding the baby. It was dressed in a white garment which she recognized as a white cotton kimono, the mother's, but it was clean, and it was comfortable and happy. Winifred stood by the stove, surrounded by three serious and interested gentlemen, to whom she was explaining the mysteries of a great iron pot of stew.

"Americans could learn a lot from this," she was saying. "I don't suppose they're aware of it, but a stew like this contains all the elements of nutrition."

"Very good!" said the grandmother, in high delight. "That makes very strong—very good. I make."

'WILD ORANGES' DAINTY SCREEN PLAY AT STRAND

Along the shores of a quiet lagoon on the Georgia coast where he had put in with his private yacht, John Woolfolk found the most exciting, tragic and exquisite moments of his life.

The result of such conflicting emotions swirling around the characters fills "Wild Oranges," playing at the Strand through Tuesday, with thrills and pathos. Virginia Valli and Frank Mayo play the leads.

Woolfolks love for the strange lonely little girl Millie, residing with an aged relative and the half-wit kept by them as a handy man, incurs the enmity and blind fury of Millie's relative and the servant. Exciting action, storms and near wrecking of the Woolfolk yacht, are featured in the picture.

Spring Suspension Only First Move by Engineers Toward Comfortable Riding

THREE MOTIONS OF CAR STUDIED

Drivers Comfort Affected By Vision

If autos, as some say, have made nervous wrecks of us, automobile engineers are trying to cure us.

At least they're concentrating on a means to prevent our going further to the dogs.

Their plan for our redemption lies in designing a car that will be really comfortable, vibrationless, shockless, smooth, silent and secure—hallelujah!

Spring suspension has been studied most assiduously, but that is only part of the program to help settle our nerves. Besides "springing," as engineers term it, other factors that make for comfort in riding are necessary control, tires, wheels, chassis frame, seating body, engine and transmission, steering gear, brakes, heating, and ventilation system and even lighting.

Heat, heating, ventilation and lighting, or even some of the other factors mentioned, have anything to do with riding comfort and nerves may be beyond the lay mind to understand. But engineers maintain that improper vision affects the comfort of motorists, especially the driver, that a stuffy car slumps their bodies and that lack of proper ventilation might make them dizzy.

So they must direct their attention not only to better springs, but to better headlights and better body design. Not only that, but they have their eyes on the engine and brakes and almost every other part of the car, even to the dash board, to make riding easier and more comfortable.

The question of mental and nervous fatigue offers quite a problem to the engineers.

To study it effectively they are beginning with research into the actual motions of an automobile. These are vertical, longitudinal and transverse.

"According to general belief," says John A. C. Warner, assistant manager of the research department of the Society of Automotive Engineers, "the vertical accelerations are responsible for the greatest degree of discomfort and fatigue. It is possible, however, that the change of acceleration and its duration rather than acceleration itself may be most important."

"Vertical accelerations caused by irregularities of road surface or otherwise are felt by the passenger as pressures, the characteristics of which depend upon the type and duration of the acceleration."

"Closely related to the straight vertical motions and perhaps equally severe in their effect are those due to pitching or rotation of the vehicle about a transverse axis."

Horizontal motion, that is the motion of the car as it moves forward or backward, has comparatively little effect on the passengers—except when a driver slams on the brakes or starts with a jerk. Yet the engineers have that to study in its relation to striking obstacles along the road.

Several methods are employed in studying these points related to riding comfort. All seek the same goal.

BUICK DISPLAY DRAWS CROWDS

New 6-Cylinder Auto Proves Revelation

Buick upheld its traditions by attracting the show rooms in various parts of the country a record crowd to see for the first time what it had to offer for the 1925 season.

The revelation was a new six-cylinder car. A car of 114 3-8 inch wheelbase, and all of the style and notable improvements that characterize the larger Buick cars.

The lines are similar to those of 1924 vintage, and there is throughout the new chassis all the earmarks of advanced engineering. A ride in this car proves it to be all that is claimed as regards speed and smoothness of operation. It has, of course, the famous valve-in-head engine which it is claimed affords more perfect combustion and quicker ignition, which means more power and less gasoline consumption. Self lubrication is worked out to a point beyond anything heretofore noted. The same successful four-wheel brakes that have kept Buick in the forefront of popularity during this last year are retained, and low pressure tires are part of the equipment. The point is made of the fact that on account of added safety factors the car has a "AA" insurance rating, entitling buyers to preferred rates.

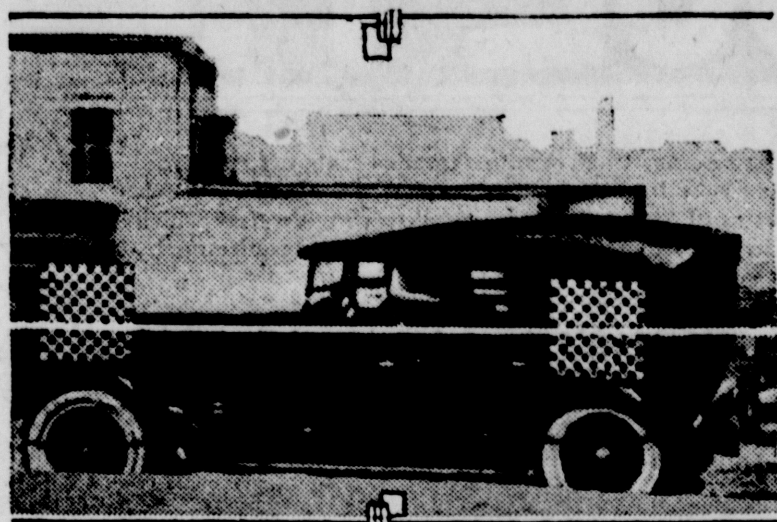

Both the touring car and roadster are finished with special enclosed permanent tops and are also provided with a heater. These two models are in addition to the regular open models.

WEAK VALVE SPRINGS

Weak valve springs, which have become weakened due to the loss of temper of the wire, will also cause sluggish action, as they can not hold the valve to its seat. Weak valve springs can be located when the engine is running by inserting a screw driver between a pair of coils and giving it a slight twist so as to increase the tension of the spring. If the engine picks up in speed it is a sure sign that the spring is weak.

The exhaust valve springs will give the most trouble, as they lose their temper, owing to the heat they are subjected to, and when they become weak they should be replaced with new ones. A little study of the spring will disclose that the tension is dependent upon the deflection of the coils that form the spring and it is readily evident that a spring which has lost its temper will not stand the deflection that one which is properly tempered will.—Automobile Digest.

AUTO RIDING-QUALITIES TESTED

One of the methods used to test an auto's riding qualities. This is by setting up two checkered boards on a car and running the auto along a white rope while a movie camera photographs the motion. The variations are noted by the movements of the boards in relation to the cord.

MOST CARS IN WESTERN BELT

California Has Most And Georgia Least

More than 15,500,000 motor cars are in actual use in the United States, according to a tabulation of registrations as of July 1. This means one automobile to about every seven people. The rest of the world together has only about 3,000,000 automobiles. If pleasure cars and trucks alike were pushed into service, nearly every person in the country could go automobile riding at the same time.

The rural western states, some of which have been supposedly "hard up," have more cars in proportion to their population than any other section of the country. To enumerate some of these states and the number of persons per machine: Iowa, 4.3; Kansas, 5.1; Minnesota, 5.5; Nebraska, 4.9; Nevada, 4.8; North Dakota, 5.2; Wisconsin, 5.8; Wyoming, 5.7. In everyone of these states the per capita registration is lower than the national figure of 7.2.

California has more machines than any other state. There is one car to every 3.3 persons in the state. Georgia has the smallest per capita automobile ownership, only one machine to every 7.3 persons.

Besides California, New York, Ohio and Pennsylvania, each have over 1,000,000 machines registered. Every state has more than the number registered a year ago.

Mountainous roads show fewer accidents than the level highways, according to an investigation made by the American Automobile association. The idea is to show that mountain touring is safer than any other form.

SMOOTH PERFORMANCE

A marked smoothness characterizes the performance of Dodge Brothers Motor Car.

In keeping with the policy of constant improvement, effective measures have been taken to minimize vibration. Applied to the body, engine, clutch, brakes, and other vital units, these refinements add immeasurably to the comfort of travel over boulevards and country roads.

The effect is so pronounced, in fact, that it is entirely fitting to classify smooth performance as one of the outstanding attributes of Dodge Brothers Motor Car.

DIRT IN ENGINE CAUSES TROUBLE

Adjustment of Carburetor May Be Affected

The air which enters the carburetor to assist in the vaporization of the fuel is laden with dirt and dust which causes trouble in many ways. It may affect the carburetor adjustment; it does not contain any ingredient that will aid combustion, but a mixture containing it is weakened, and when permitted to enter the cylinder and lodge on the valve seats reduces compression, hence the power of the engine. Mixed with lubricating oil, it is distributed over the cylinder walls, forming an abrasive which is responsible for excessive wear of the internal parts of the engine. The general supposition has been that dilution of the fuel combined with lubricating oil caused excessive carbon deposits, but the residue products of combustion meeting the particles of dirt and dust, lodge on the walls of the combustion chamber and assist in forming carbon deposits. Fuel which is diluted and works by the rings carries some of this dirt and dust with it and containing as it does abrasive materials, results in rapid wear of the pistons, rings and cylinders.

The seriousness of this was first discovered in the tractor engine and then in the motor truck engine, both of which must necessarily work over dusty roads and surfaces. The elimination of such conditions has been made possible by the development of an air cleaner, a device which separates the dirt and dust from the air before it enters the carburetor. While manufacturers and owners of vehicles have long realized the necessity of using only clean fuel, it has only been lately that consideration has been given to cleaning the air. Evidence of the necessity for such a device is established by the fact that a number of passenger cars and trucks are now equipped with it. Its use has been brought about in the face of opposition on the part of vehicle manufacturers to any increase in equipment, even though the need of such equipment may have been definitely proven. Anything which tends to prolong the life of an engine certainly is desirable equipment and one is justified in classifying an air cleaner as such equipment.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 6.—From a twentieth in 1914, to one-fifth last year, was the rise in proportion of highway funds paid out by Uncle Sam's motorists.

A study of the sources from which road funds were obtained in the last 10 years, made by the bureau of public roads of the U. S. department of agriculture, showed a marked tendency to collect a larger proportion of highway funds from motorists.

In 1914, out of a total highway income of $240,262,784, the collections from motor vehicles amounted to $12,382,031, or 5.1 per cent of the total. Last year motor vehicles contributed more than $225,000,000, or almost a fifth of the entire highway income.

In the six New England states this contribution amounts to more than a fourth of the highway income in that area.

EASES SHOCK

When going over rough spots in the road it will ease the shock to feed gas with the hand control while gently applying the brakes. The idea is that under this arrangement the car pulls when going into the hole and when drawing out of them, yet without coasting into them with a jolt. By keeping the speed of the car constant the jolts are reduced to a minimum.

July 1 showed a 19 per cent increase in registrations over that of the same date last year.

SPLITTING OF EIGHT DESIGNERS' PROBLEM

With the advent of many straight eight motor inventors are said to be turning their attention to a type of straight eight that can be split into independent four and used as such when speed and power are not required. It is simple enough to split the engines but the problem lies in harmonizing the motors so as to prevent vibration when they work in unison.

Automobile Dollar's Value Shows Boost

Interesting comparisons made by National Automobile Chamber of Commerce in value of amount of goods obtainable between the dollar of 1913 and 1923 shows that the value of the dollar as it relates to the purchase of an automobile has increased to such an extent that the industry to-day stands out as the only field where a dollar purchases more than it did ten years ago. In 1923 the automobile dollar represented 111 cents as compared with the dollar in 1913. The dollar will also buy 101 cents worth of gasoline and 123 cents in tires. The automobile industry is the only one that has increased in efficiency during the past ten years, as the dollar used for clothing today buys 51.8 cents as compared with 1913's 100 per cent value; shoes, 60 cents; food, 68.5 cents; furniture and house furnishings, 53.4 cents; rents, 61.2 cents; frame buildings, 45 cents; brick buildings, 46.3 cents; concrete buildings, 48.5; farm crops, 73.5 cents; live stock, 98 cents; consumer goods, 64.5 cents. This clearly indicates that automobile prices are low while living costs have mounted.—Editorial in Automobile Digest.

MAINTENANCE HINTS

In cold weather watch the radiation system. Use a good cleaning mixture to remove scale and mud. Also an anti-freeze spirit should be used.

In case your motor will not start, don't keep flooding the carburetor. Prime the motor by putting gas in the petcocks. If this doesn't work, look for ignition trouble.

A little attention to your car will make it last much longer and give much better service. If you still drove a horse you would see that it was fed and watered regularly, and a car needs just as regular treatment.

See that your brakes are properly set if you leave your car on an incline, and also turn your front wheels toward the curb.

It is best not to start or stop suddenly, nor to skid around corners. The strain set up in your tires by that form of misuse is terrific.

Don't run the motor in a closed garage. The carbon monoxide in exhaust gases is odorless, and a small percentage of it in the air is fatal.

AUTOS IN FAR EAST

Some 90 per cent of the automobiles in Siam are American. Other parts of the Far East are fast taking to American autos.

DODGE POLICY FAVORS BUYERS

So Says E. P. Baker About Yearly Models

It is quite evident from the comments of buyers, according to E. P. Baker, local Dodge dealer, that the public appreciates the significance of Dodge Brothers policy of making constant improvements in their motor cars instead of changing models every year.

Magazines, newspapers and bulletin boards everywhere are reminding the people this month that this policy continues to prevail and that they may buy Dodge Brothers cars without fear of seeing a new and entirely different model put on the market soon after they take possession of the present type car, Baker says.

It serves as a wholesome reassurance to prospective buyers. They dislike the idea of buying a car today and finding a month or so later that it is an obsolete model. And it is only natural that they should. The depreciation loss is out of proportion for a few months' use. Moreover, most people like to be up-to-date in their motor equipment and if they wish to follow their desire in this respect they must accept this sharp depreciation loss.

"Dodge Brothers Motor Car owners who buy new cars every year—and there are many of them—have a big advantage here. A one-year-old Dodge Brothers car is modern in appearance and mechanical design. That fact is conceded by everyone. Equally important to its resale value, however, is the fact that it is substantially the same car that Dodge Brothers will manufacture a year later.

"Another factor enters into this policy which is also of considerable importance to buyers. A change in models involves a complete change of dies and production schedules. It upsets a factory completely and often means a virtual stoppage of production. This naturally means a loss to the manufacturer and his only recourse is to get it back in the price of his product. The saving effected by Dodge Brothers, through their policy of constant, gradual refinement instead of radical annual changes of models, is faithfully returned to the buyer in the form of surplus value. Every dollar saved, of course, enables the factory to give that much more for the money."

SIDE SAFETY LIGHTS

Safety lights of all kinds have been coming out lately, for attachment to the left running board. They permit the oncoming driver at night to tell the exact point of clearance for his car.

TO CHURCH BY BUS

A southern Ohio rural church is bringing its congregation to Sunday services by bus—and so is assured of a good attendance. Every car owner of the small congregation calls for those who have no cars.

So safely and satisfactorily have BUICK Four-Wheel-Brakes performed upon thousands of Buick cars that not even so much as a cotter pin was changed in building the 1925 Buick brake equipment.

SAYS BOARDER STOLE HIS WIFE

Husband Sues Him For $10,000 Heart Balm

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 6.—When he saw his bride of eight months board a street car with their "star boarder," Benito Natividad decided that his wife's affections had been stolen from him.

To him there was something mysterious and suspicious in the gallant way in which Felix Degesus, the romantic looking "star boarder," assisted Mrs. Natividad onto the car. He didn't like it. Felix was much too good-looking anyway, and now that he came to think of it, Natividad suddenly remembered a number of meaning glances which had passed between the pair.

His suspicions grew to such an extent he decided that the void which had been created when Felix stole the affections of Mrs. Natividad could only be filled by 10,000 shining dollars.

He recited all his troubles in the court, which he brought before Judge Smith. After reading the complaint, Judge Smith allowed a $10,000 bail for the arrest of Felix, fixing the bail at $300.

Natividad asserted in his petition that he was married on January 12 and that he and his wife had lived in absolute harmony and happiness until Degesus came along and assumed the role of "star boarder."

Soon, Natividad alleged, Degesus was making "secret love" to the plaintiff's wife, but he remained in ignorance of what was going on. He had no inkling that his wife's love was being stolen from him until he saw the pair, arm in arm, getting on a car.

His suspicions were aroused and he investigated, he said. He talked with other persons in the house and friends of the couple and found, he alleges, that his surmise was correct.

Boy Reads Novels And Fakes Up Plot on King

WASHINGTON, Sept. 6.—A plot in which the "King or Spain" was marked for slaughter has been traced to its source by the Spanish embassy. Department of Justice agents and the Baltimore police.

Henry Hilmer, 15, of Baltimore, recently wrote a letter to Giuseppe Schiaffino, Spanish vice consul there, saying he had evidence of a plan to assassinate the king. Mr. Schiaffino immediately notified the embassy, and the department of justice and the police were asked for aid.

Young Hilmer, a short time later, offered in another letter to get in touch with the vice consul. He would, he said, be at a certain corner at a certain time, wearing a red ribbon on his right arm.

"There were six men," he told Mr. Schiaffino. "They disappeared into a deserted house. They planned to assassinate the King of Spain. I heard them."

The boy's story gave the official all the clues necessary to solution of the mystery. The plot, it was found, was a fiction plot, based on a lurid tale, and Henry, his paper-back inspiration in ashes, has turned his talents again to the less fantastic but more remunerative business of finding the owners of telegrams bearing obscure addresses.

SELLS MELON FOR $5. THEN GETS $25 OFFER

WEATHERFORD, Texas, Sept. 6.—And they say there is no such thing as luck. A. G. Duncan received an offer of $25 for a prize melon weighing 103 1/2 pounds that he had grown. A fair offer, even though it was the largest watermelon to be exhibited in Weatherford this year.

But luck was against the successful grower, for the melon had already been sold for $5.

Plans to Dig Up Cannon Planted 59 Years Ago

SUNBURY, Pa., Sept. 6.—To go to Petersburg, Va., and dig up a cannon he buried fifty-nine years ago after a battle between Confederate and Union forces is the plan of Henry C. Diehl of Hinton, Okla., who is visiting relatives at Washington. Diehl says that he wanted to ship the gun to Watson-town, but the expressman wanted charges paid in advance, and as he was without funds he buried it, intending to get it later.

He never went back, but he is confident he can locate it. Moving picture men have asked him to indicate the day that he will dig, so they can photograph him.

BELIEVE WRECK IS LOST CONDOR

British War Sloop Disaster Of 1901 Recalled

VICTORIA, B. C., Sept. 6.—Discovery of what is thought to be the hull of the old British sloop-of-war Condor, which was wrecked with the loss of 104 lives, December 2, 1901, is reported from the west coast of Vancouver Island, not far from Victoria. The remains of the hull are so deeply embedded in the sand below tide level that difficulty is being experienced by investigators.

Vigorous efforts to discover definitely whether the wreck is that of the Condor will be made the next few weeks.

The Condor, which was one of the best known and finest ships of her time in the British navy, sailed from here on the afternoon of December 2, 1901. That night a terrific gale swept up the Straits of Juan de Fuca. A few days later a single lifebelt bearing the word "Condor" floated into the harbor, and that was the last trace ever found of the crack man-of-war. Of the 104 men aboard the vessel not one escaped.

Where and how the vessel foundered has been one of the most baffling mysteries of the North Pacific. If her hull has been discovered now she is one of a large company of vessels which have gone to their doom on the rockbound coast of this island, called the "graveyard of the Pacific."

Experts of the British Columbia Historical Museum here are examining a piece of timber found recently on the west coast of the island and believed to be part of the hull of a Spanish galleon. This wood was found buried in the sands at a point frequented by the Spaniards during their original occupation of this territory.

BAN BARREL FOR WATER VICTIMS

Red Cross Condemns Us In Reviving as Hazardous

WASHINGTON, Sept. 6.—Barrel-rolling as a method of freeing the lungs of water and reviving persons taken unconscious from the water, was condemned as "most hazardous" by experts of the Red Cross life saving service at headquarters of the organization.

The simplicity of the prone pressure method of resuscitation, the experts declared, has "outlawed" the barrel-rolling and has demonstrated how much more effective and easier is the former expedient.

"Forget the barrel; waste no time," said a statement issued at headquarters. "Lay the victim on his stomach; extend one arm directly over the head; bend the other arm at the elbow and rest his cheek on the hand to keep nose and mouth off the ground. Kneel facing forward, straddling his legs. Place palms of hands on each side of back, just above belt line."

"With arms straight, lean gradually forward, pressing downward and forward and counting slowly, 'one, two, three.' Bring your body back, counting slowly, 'four, five,' straighten arms and repeat pressure. Keep up work steadily until breathing begins."

"Unless a doctor takes charge, remove victim well covered on a stretcher to a hospital or to his home. Don't get discouraged; stick to it for two or three hours if necessary."

Didn't Waste Money on Food

"The recent campaign against wastefulness in eating did not affect me much as I haven't been able to eat anything but toast and tea for the past five years. Even that would create gas and cause me distress. My weight was down to eighty-four pounds and my complexion muddy. I had frequent pains in the region of my appendix. I am glad I did not listen to an operation as Mary's Wonderful Remedy has made a new woman of me." It is a simple, harmless preparation that removes the catarrhal mucus from intestinal tract and allays the inflammation which causes practically all stomach, liver and intestinal ailments, including appendicitis. One dose will convince or money refunded. At all druggists. —Adv.
